The President Returns Prayers and Cannon New Ideas Cause Fear Earthquakes and Mad Foxes

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

Yesterday morning bands played, crowds cheered, President Roosevelt landed at Portland, Oregon, back from his pleasant, useful combination fishing trip and inspection of Uncle Sam's island possessions. All the people are glad to have him back safely; and will now doubtless begin to answer the questions he asked on the radio, before he left, something after the fashion of "Jesting Pilate" in "would not wait for an answer."

You remember that the President asked all Americans:

"Are you better off than you were last year?

"Are your debts less burdensome?

"Is your bank account more secure?

"Are your working conditions better?

"Is your faith in your own individual future more firmly grounded?"

Some big industrialists report business better. Many smaller people will tell the President "there seemed to be an improvement up to about two weeks ago, then things went back."

That is the unanimous report of hotel keepers. They say the Wall Street slump which came a few days ago discourages their business and they wonder why something is not done "to hold up Wall Street prices that represent the public's opinion of all great properties in America."

In Germany, cannon boom loudly, expressing the national sorrow, while many pray for the soul of the old patriot who served his country so well. They pray perhaps also that his memory may have power to curb Hitler, as Hindenburg is supposed to have curbed the chancellor while living.

Angels that listen, unless divinely enlightened, may find it difficult to understand that loud cannon roaring and whispered prayers refer to the same earthly event.

Chancellor Hitler tells Germany: "I am steeped in the conviction that all authority of the state must proceed from the people and be ratified in free, secret election."

Germany will vote and it is easy to guess how. As a matter of fact, Germans are still overwhelmingly with Hitler, as regards numbers, although not quite as "overwhelmingly" as they were some time ago. Every German soldier has taken the following oath:

"I swear by God this holy oath: That I shall be absolutely obedient to der fuehrer (the leader) of the German Reich and people, Adolph Hitler, supreme head of the army, and that I will be ready as a brave soldier to give my life for this oath."

If there should be any voting slip, the army can be relied on to take care of the situation.

If the chain of human intelligence is no stronger than its weakest link, it is a feeble chain.

As is well known, many savage tribes do not know that marriage contributes to the creation of children or that the father has anything to do with the child's arrival. Young women are told not to go into the water at certain times, warned that demons in the waves will cause them to have children.

In other tribes, when twins appear, both are killed. The father believes that while one is probably his, the other is certainly the child of a demon. Not knowing which is which, he kills both.

Cetinje, Montenegro, reports a farmer stoned to death by villagers who saw him using a toothbrush and concluded that it was "a magic wand for practicing witchcraft." Unfortunately for the victim, he was seen using the "strange instrument that he carried" just after a cow had ceased to give milk, two dogs had gone mad, and the son of the richest man in the village had eloped with a gypsy girl.

It is not for us that call ourselves civilized to criticize these simple villagers.

The toothbrush was a new idea to them. You know what our "best minds" usually do with a new idea, no matter how useful. They get used to it and reach the conclusion that it is really their own.

Mild earthquake shocks have gently rocked the coast of Maine recently, but nothing cataclysmic happened. Windows rattled, pictures were found out of plumb on the walls. That is an old country, and the rocky coast has probably done its important "settling down" in ages long past.

More important than the gentle earthquakes, in Maine, is an epidemic of rabies among foxes, that, in their madness,

Hitler Now Real Caesar

END OF NAZI RULE SEEN IN COUP

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

Berlin, Aug. 4 — Hitler, supreme in life, is now preparing to extend his power over the German people after his death. He is going to choose his own successor.

He is the first modern dictator to do so. But he is the first modern dictator to become a Caesar.

For Germany has had a revolution during the last forty-eight hours just as important as the revolution that brought the National Socialists to power. It may sound paradoxical but it is true that Hitler has not only staged a coup d'etat against the last remnants of the old Weimar state constitution but has made a revolution that will equally destroy National Socialism or Nazism as Germany has known it for the last eighteen months.

NAZIISM PASSES

Germany has passed from National Socialism to Caesarism. It will still be called National Socialism, just as in Russia they still refer to Communism. But just as in Russia they began by calling their fundamental doctrine Marxism, then Communism, then Leninism and finally Stalinism, just so in Germany it is necessary now to describe both the philosophy and prestige of the new state as Hitlerism and Hitler as the Caesar.

In proposing to name his successor, Hitler has adopted one of the most characteristic practices of the Caesars of old Rome. In his Reichstag speech after the "blood bath" of June 30, he named himself the

DRUNK GIRLS' REVELS TOLD BY PARENTS

Heartache letters of hundreds of mothers and fathers.

POLICE GET LETTERS

These letters, the basis of a secret federal investigation of Boston night clubs, taverns and restaurants, have been turned over to the police commissioner for action.

Federal agents, who checked up on the places after receiving complaints, said they found conditions that could only be described as shocking and appalling, but pointed out that it was a matter in which the police, and not they, had power to act.

While no announcement was forthcoming from police headquarters, there was much indignation in other official quarters, especially among the members of the licensing board.

One of these, Miss Mary Driscoll, said:

"I have been watching restaurants myself night after night, especially places that serve liquor to young women. The other members of the board have been making investigations, too. But we can't control conditions alone. The three of us can't be all over at once."

FIREBUG ROUTS 500 OLD VETS

Nearly 500 of the 600 inmates of the Old Soldiers' home, Chelsea, were hurried from the building today when a fire, which police believe to have been set was discovered in the basement of an unused dormitory.

The alarm was given when the sprinkler alarm in the dormitory sounded. In the quarters of Chief Engineer Bernard Loughlin, who immediately began an investigation and found the dying embers of a blaze in the center of the dormitory basement floor.

He called police.

When Sergeant William O'Connor, of the Chelsea police station arrived, he found glass in the basement door had been broken and footprints on the floor indicated one or more persons had entered.

Boxes and dry wood had then been dragged from one of the bins in the basement to the center of the floor where they had been burning.

But the witnesses, including such notables as Carole Lombard, June Collyer and Mona Maris, say Raft did land two knockdown punches, one with each fist. It happened in Hollywood and there's a lot of talk.

'Pretty Boy' Raft, or Somebody, in Fight

By International News Service.

Hollywood, Cal., Aug. 4—Hollywood's film colony staged another of its "battles of a century" for the edification of tourists outside the Brown Derby and today, as is always the case, the stage had been reached of claims, counter-claims and denials.

George Raft, of the polished, pa-o-tent-leather hair, who once stepped around in the squared circle as a professional pugilist, denies he did any fighting "as far as he can remember."

However, witnesses to the affray in the parking lot outside the elite luncheon spot of the screen luminaries—and there were movie stars among the witnesses—insist that George did swing with rights and lefts in approved fistiana style.

Then steps up Mack Gray, sometimes called "Killer," who is

SACK OF EXPLOSIVES FOUND NEAR TRACK

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 4—Revelation was made here today of the discovery and frustration of the second plot within 60 days to dynamite a train with President Roosevelt aboard.

Keen eyesight of a railroad employe was responsible for saving the President's life, attaches at the sheriff's office said.

A sack of dynamite, containing detonating caps as well, was found beside the tracks over which the Presidential train was bound. That was four days ago, but the matter was blanketed in secrecy until today.

County officers were joined by secret service agents upon discovery of the plot and none as much as breathed about the matter during the subsequent days of investigation. As far as could be determined no arrests have been made.

The special train bearing President Roosevelt arrived preparatory to leaving for Ephrata, where the President will disembark after breakfast for the Grand Coulee Dam site.

This Grand Coulee plot recalled the alarm spread in Massachusetts on June 1, when the President was on his way to Groton for the graduation of his son, Franklin D., Jr.

At that time, an anonymous warning was given police that the Presidential train would be

DEMPSEY BABY IS A GIRL

New York, Aug. 4—Jack Dempsey's first born will not follow in his footsteps in the ring.

This fact was firmly established today when it was announced that the former heavyweight champion's wife had given birth to a seven and a half pound girl in Polyclinic Hospital. Both Mrs. Dempsey, who was Hannah Williams, stage star, and the baby were reported as doing well.

Max Waxman, Dempsey's business manager, said:

"And so is Jack! He took a lot of punishment, though. He sat up all night pacing the floor. But he, too, is resting well now."

Dempsey had expressed the hope the baby would be a boy. Pacing up and down the hospital corridor, he said:

"If it is I'm going to match him with Gene Tunney's kid as soon as they are big enough."

100,000 TO MARCH IN VON HINDENBURG DEATH PARADE

REICH TO HALT ALL ACTIVITIES DURING RITES

Final Disposition of the Body Is Still Undetermined

By Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 4—A death parade in which more than 100,000 persons may have a last look at the late President Paul Von Hindenburg is being planned as part of the funeral exercises Tuesday at the Tannenberg Memorial Monument.

The march, which possibly will last all through the night, will pass through the "Hindenburg Tower" of the monument where the coffin will be placed following the official exercises.

50,000 TO ATTEND

More than 200,000 spectators are expected to attend the services but officials regarded it as doubtful if half of them, even if they march three or four abreast, can be accorded an opportunity to pass the bier.

Every city, town and village of the Reich is expected to participate in the services at Tannenberg, the funeral oration to be delivered by Chancellor Adolph Hitler will be broadcast worldwide.

Throughout the country, moreover, Nazi storm troopers will engage in the solemn funeral parade between 11 a. m. and noon Tuesday. The nation's activity will be slowed down to a virtual stop, including a complete one-minute pause at 11:45 a. m.

FLAGS TO BE MASSED

In the Tannenberg monument, the President's coffin will rest during the services in a room the floor of which will be covered with white sand sprinkled with oak twigs in accordance with Prussian custom.

In the inner courtyard, fronting a high cross which designates the burial place of 20 soldiers who were killed in the battle of Tannenberg in 1914, will be massed 50 old regimental flags. Before these flags will stand the regimental guard of honor. Three sacrificial fires, billowing out black clouds of smoke symbolic of grief, will burn steadily in front of the monument, the eight towers of which will be covered with pine and oak branches as well as draped in black flags.

Several of the nation's foremost artists are supervising the decoration of the monument for the occasion.

4000 SPECIAL GUESTS

Four thousand privileged guests, including foreign diplomats, will have places inside the monument during the funeral services. Because of a lack of hotels, they will be accommodated overnight—as will many of the spectators—in hundreds of special trains.

The final disposition of the body, which lies in state today in Neudeck dressed in a Field Marshal's uniform, remains undetermined with no indication as to whether it will be left in the Hindenburg tower of the monument or will be buried at Neudeck.

Meanwhile, thousands of workmen were hastily employed at Tannenberg to increase the telephone communications, set up radio broadcasting apparatus, and erect the black-draped tribunal from which the final rites for Von Hindenburg will be conveyed to the whole world.

Hindenburg's Will Cannot Be Found

By International News Service

Neudeck, Germany, Aug. 4—President Paul von Hindenburg's will cannot be found, although it has been searched for frantically. It became known today, and this circumstance may account for the government's delay in definitely announcing where he will be buried.

It is known the great Field Marshal made a will disposing of his modest estate, however. It is thought he made it privately, and it must be found in his home. Dr. Otto Meissner, President von Hindenburg's Secretary of State, is understood to have searched repeatedly for the document, which he declares he is sure is in existence.

At the same time it became known that besides the Field Marshal's two daughters, no women will represent the mothers of Germany's two million soldiers of the World War at the funeral.

Stokes and McGlue Seek Chairmanship

If Joseph A. Maynard resigns as chairman of the Democratic state committee on September 1, it is expected that the chief contenders for his office will be Joseph M. Stokes of Cambridge, one of the vice-chairmen of the committee. Maynard, because of the ban on office holders being actively in politics, has indicated that he will resign.

Jobless Workers Rare in Douglas

An unemployment rate of only 4.9 per cent for men and 1.1 per cent for all workers has been discovered in the little town of Douglas by state unemployment census takers.

Uxbridge, an adjoining town, was able to boast of only 7.8 per cent unemployed, while West Brookfield was poorest for the district with 21.7 per cent not working.

Immigrant Boy Hitler Was One of a Crowd—20 Years Ago!

There were thousands gathered in this Munich square on August 2, 1914. They were cheering, waving, handclapping. Germany had just declared war on Russia. The bands were playing in the background, flags waved from that statue base on the left. Patriotism ran high. One of those in the throng here was a young Austrian boy who had come over to Germany to seek fortune and whatever came with that search. His name was Hitler, but few knew or cared. Shortly after this picture was taken, this Hitler youth joined the German army as an obscure foot soldier. Eventually he got to be a corporal. Twenty years later he was the master of the destinies of Germany and ranked as few kings on the chessboard of Europe. Note that the Hitler mustache was the same short-ended affair then as distinguishes "der Fuehrer" today. Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Hitler Plans Radio Plea to U. S. on Monday

Berlin, Aug. 4—Chancellor Adolf Hitler will lay his cards on the table for united Germany and all the world—particularly the United States—to see when the all-Nazi Reichstag is assembled on Monday in answer to his latest edict.

Der Fuhrer today issued the call. He declared that the occasion was to be a memorial service to the late President Paul Von Hindenburg.

But a spokesman for the chancellery hinted to correspondents that the Hitler address is to be of a "political nature"—the expected "justification" for his seizing the reins of the presidency upon Von Hindenburg's death.

WANTS TO BE UNDERSTOOD

Further, it was intimated, the Chancellor may be expected to assure the world that abandonment of the office of President and merger of its powers with his own does not mean any new or radical departure from the present political program.

The fact is that Chancellor Hitler is anxious to assuage the fears of the world and in particularly desirous of having the United States "understand" him, the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, however, Hitler was sparing no pains to insure his own position as sole arbiter of Germany's destinies.

The oath of allegiance to himself, taken by the army and navy, also was administered secretly Thursday to the Schutz Staffel, the picked Nazi soldiery that composes "der Fuhrer's praetorian guard."

It was pointed out today that, in designating Aug. 19 as the date of a plebiscite in which he hopes to gain the approval of the nation for his acquisition of gew power, Hitler has allowed but little time to make much of a campaign for votes, but at the same time has permitted virtually no time at all for opposition to be organized against him.

GOOD TASTE FORBIDS

The period of national mourning for the late President will extend to Aug. 14. In the interests of good taste, it was pointed out, Hitler cannot campaign too obviously for public favor, making it necessary to seek indirect methods.

The factors that would operate against Hitler in a plebiscite under normal conditions of constitutional freedom of the press, criticism and personal opinion, none of which obtains in Germany today include:

Millions of Catholics, Protestants, Socialists and Communists in their hearts reject him.

The complete and utter isolation, morally and politically and to a large extent economically, of Germany from the rest of the world.

The pressure of a serious domestic economical situation.

The factors that speak for an overwhelming vote for Hitler are:

Fear.

WILL IS MISSING

A puzzled press and public opinion.

A campaign for Hitler is permissible, but one against the requested sanction of the cabinet action is prohibited.

All machinery of the election is in the hands of the government or the Nazi party.

JAPS TO WARN SOVIET RUSSIA

By International News Service

Tokio, Aug. 4—The Japanese government is about to serve an "ominous" warning on Russia, listing a chapter of "unfriendly" acts, the influential newspaper Nichi Nichi declared today.

Foreign Minister Koki Hirota and War Minister Hayashi are preparing to adopt a vigorous policy toward the Soviet government, the Nichi Nichi declared.

Japan, the newspaper asserted, will point out to the Soviet government:

First—Soviet airplanes frequently have crossed the borders of Manchukuo.

Second—Soviet airplanes repeatedly have attacked Manchukoan river steamers.

Third—The Soviet government has rejected a "reasonable" offer for the purchase of Russia interests in the Chinese eastern railway.

WARNER DYING OF BEATING

Morris Warner, 30, single, of Walnut avenue, Revere, is dying in Boston City Hospital of a concussion of the brain and internal injuries as a result of a beating he suffered today at Tremont and Warrenton streets, South End.

Warner, who is known as a theatrical producer, had been visiting friends in the South End. Shortly after 3 o'clock he was found unconscious by Sergeant Michael Adley of Warren avenue station.

Two hours later he was identified when a registered nurse appeared and said she had been retained to attend him.

Dr. Joseph W. Devine of East Broadway, South Boston, said Warner obviously had received one of the worst beatings he had encountered since he became a police surgeon.

AUSTRIA TO PUT HITLER CHARGE UP TO LEAGUE

By ALFRED TYRNAUER
Copyright, 1934, International News Service

Vienna, Aug. 4—Charges that high officials of the Hitler government in Germany engineered last week's Nazi putsch which led to the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss and cost more than 100 lives are contained in a document the Austrian government is soon to publish.

The document, in the form of a "Brown book," will be submitted to the League of Nations and to the British, French and Italian foreign offices because these three powers publicly proclaimed their intention of maintaining the independence of Austria.

The document, based on investigation by General Winterstin, charges that last week's putsch was organized at Munich with the knowledge and sufferance of the highest German officials.

Large quantities of explosives and hand grenades, of German origin and some bearing German army labels, were found in the possession of captured Austrian Nazis, it is charged.

HITLER TURNS TO CAESARISM

supreme judge with power of life and death over the German people. That was Caesarism.

He now named himself the supreme war lord as well as the civil head of the state. That, too, is Caesarism.

TO NAME SUCCESSOR

But in taking it up on himself to name his successor Who will have all the power he had and, theoretically at least, be just as difficult to dislodge, Hitler, himself lish a non-hereditary dynasty. It is childless, has undertaken to establ something Mussolini, Stalin, Pilsudski, Mustapha Kemal never dreamed of doing.

The names of men who might be considered possibit successors to the man who, like Persia's "King of Kings," might properly be entitled the "leader of leaders," have been mentioned.

GOERING POWERFUL

Hermann Wilhelm Goering, the man of many uniforms, many titles and much power, is one of them. He is minister of air, with command of that force of airplanes which already, in its babyhood, use frightened Europe.

There was a time before June 30 when signs of coolness between Hitler and Goering were apparent. But June 30, when both men went out to kill their enemies, united them.

Then there is Rudolf Hess, Hitler's quiet, smooth-mannered, hard-working vice chief of the Nazi party. He would be the man Hitler probably could most completely depend upon.

There is also Wilhelm Frick, minister of the Interior of the Reich, an industrious, colorless, conscientious official.

Whoever is appointed, the vice president, on succeeding Hitler, would take Hitler's name. Something like "Herman, the Hitler" or "Rudolph, the Hitler."

Ferrero Calls Hitler's 'Massacre' Peace Sign

By GUGLIELMO FERRERO
The Foremost Historian of Europe
Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service Inc.

Geneva, Aug. 4—"The disarmament conference ought to meet in plenary session and proclaim Hitler its honorary president. He has found the true formula for disarmament, at last!"

"That is a paradox which requires some explanation. I don't understand!"

"What did he do on the 30th of June? He massacred the leaders of his army. If all governments followed his example, Europe would soon be disarmed."

This strange conversation took place at Geneva between two persons closely connected with the disarmament conference. We will call them A and B. After A's reply, B went off laughing, but rather frightened.

TRUTH IN JEST

A's witticism was really rather violent. It contains, however, in the form of a jest, a much simpler truth than the world's mind has yet grasped.

Round what does the whole situation of Europe and the world revolve today? Round the fear that the Germany of 1934 may repeat what Germany did in 1914. Germany's possible revenge is the nightmare that weighs upon our epoc since the coming to power of Hitler and his party; and this nightmare has already let loose a new rivalry in armaments, similar to that which led to the war of 1914.

And yet nothing seems more chimerical to me than this fear. If man would not always march toward the past, everyone would easily make a reflection which, on the contrary, no one makes.

ARMIES NEEDED

For Germany to attack France or Poland, or both, she would have to mobilize two or three million men. But can a state whose head is reduced to massacring the leaders of his personal army mobilize those two or three million men?

If he has massacred the leaders of his army it is because he feared that they would disobey him or turn their arms against him. And if he has this fear concerning a relatively small army, recruited from among his partisans, how could he hope to exact obedience from a much larger army, composed of all sorts of men, including his enemies, Communists, Socialists, Catholics, Jews?

The military organization achieved by the west during the 19th century is monstrous, inhuman and absurd, to raise armies of millions of men by arming all citizens from the age of 18 to 45 is one of the most extravagant and dangerous ideas the human brain has conceived.

COLONIAL WARS POSSIBLE

But there is at least one advantage in this organization—that in order to make a war of aggression with such armies one needs a very rich government, very strong, very sure of its people, as was the German government in 1914. Such a government no longer exists in any part of Europe.

That is why I do not believe in a war of great powers. If they were allowed to do so. Colonial wars are still possible—between Italy and Abyssinia, for example.

But the great powers of Europe will remain quiet, even if they throw away millionrds of useless armaments. None of them is any longer capable of mobilizing millions of men, except for a war of defence.

1737 Will of Old Colony Man Found

Byannors, Ill., Aug. 4 (AP)—Faded, but still legible, a last will and testament drawn on Aug. 4, 1737, 18 years before the outbreak of the Revolutionary War, was uncovered yesterday among heirlooms of Emerson Andrew here. The parchment document was penned and sealed by Samuel Davies at Massachusetts Bay. Stock, land and silver comprised the bequests.

Car Crash Bridge Railing, 1 Dead

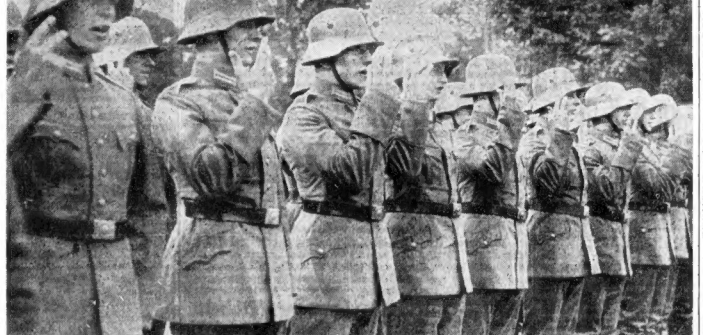
A sedan crashing through a bridge railing in West Schaghticoke, New York, resulted in one woman being dead today and her companion seriously injured.

According to ice Boston and Maine officials, Miss Paulina S. Farna, 27, of Cohoes, New York, was instantly killed and Hugh Macken, 28, of Menands, New York, is at Leonard hospital in a critical condition.

Hunt NRA Time

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP)—Police today were searching for a wrist watch reported lost by General Hugh S. Johnson.

Nazi Troopers Swear New Allegiance to Hitler



The oath of allegiance given by the regular army of Germany to the Third Reich recently was repeated as they were ordered to swear obedience to Adolf Hitler. The above Berlin soldiers show that the right hand is not raised high, the right elbow merely being bent. They project the thumb and two fingers of the right hand. The oath reads in part: "I will unconditionally obey Adolf Hitler, leader of the German Reich and nation and supreme commander of the army and navy and will be ready to sacrifice my life for the sake of this oath." Listen, World!

by ELSIE ROBINSON

His Truth Goes Marching On!

A strange and moving thing happened during the darkest time of the recent San Francisco strike.

Elsie Robinson

For days—during which, time had ceased to have any meaning—the crippled city had cowered under an indefinable terror. Men wandered aimlessly along the empty streets . . . collected briefly in dark, restless clots . . . went straggling on again. Something more demoralizing than the halted traffic, more deeply menacing than machine guns or bombs, had them in its grip.

Some remembered the earthquake and fire of 1906, saw again those desolate, blasted ruins. Then, too, there had been that feeling—harder to bear than any physical anguish—that the very foundations of life had been swept away. Strikes could be mediated. Wreckage could be rebuilt. But for that spiritual demoralization, there seemed no cure.

Passing men eyed each other, tried to speak. But their voices faltered and stopped. The silence tightened.

Suddenly, from some uncertain source, there came the sound of music. Faint, at first . . . muffled . . . rising and falling on listless gusts of air, the song took shape . . . spread. Blocks away, men stopped, looked questioningly at each other, then turned . . . began moving toward Union square.

Down cobbled-stoned alleys. Up glittering boulevards. Past packing-box barricades . . . gun mounts . . . crates of rotting vegetables . . . mounds of unmoved freight. Past wrecked trucks, demolished tracks. Past exquisitely inlaid doorways of crystal and chrome opening into store aisles, dark and empty as tunnels.

Past pools of plate glass, in which floated webs of lace, gleaming pelts of fur, strings of pearls, slippers with rhinestone heels . . . All the lovely litter of a great city's luxurious life . . . the men moved slowly—staring like sleep walkers—toward the music.

As they moved, as the music grew nearer, clearer . . . as the sense of the song stole over them . . . something happened. At first their feet had lagged, in the apathy born of weeks of wandering. Presently they quickened . . . rose and fell with a stronger beat, as though seeking an almost forgotten rhyme. Backs straightened. Lax jaws tightened.

Suddenly, rounding in from Geary, Powell, Stockton Post, the music broke full upon them from the boxed radio enclosure at the center of Union Square. Full, strong, like a long shout it came rolling:

"MINE EYES HAVE SEEN THE GLORY OF THE COMING OF THE LORD."

Flaring, flaming, like a great flag flinging its challenge at the darkening skies, at the cowering streets, poured the song. Their song. The Battle Hymn of Their Republic.

Once, as boys, they had learned that song. Once, as men, they had clung to it. Then, something had happened . . . something that seemed to rob life and men of plan and prop.

But now the song was back! Now, once more, hope stirred in them, pride swept through them. Hope for themselves . . . for all men. Pride in that nation which gave all men a chance!

Their eyes burned. Their dry lips moistened. Forgetting their rags, forgetting their bewilderment, their anger and hunger and fear, they surged forward. Up the tall hills of San Francisco, down to the wide waters, went the fighting cry—

"Mine eyes have seen the glory
Of the coming of the Lord,
He is trampling out the vineyard
Where the grapes of wrath are stored.
He has loosed the mighty lightning
Of His terrible swift sword,
HIS TRUTH IS MARCHING ON!"

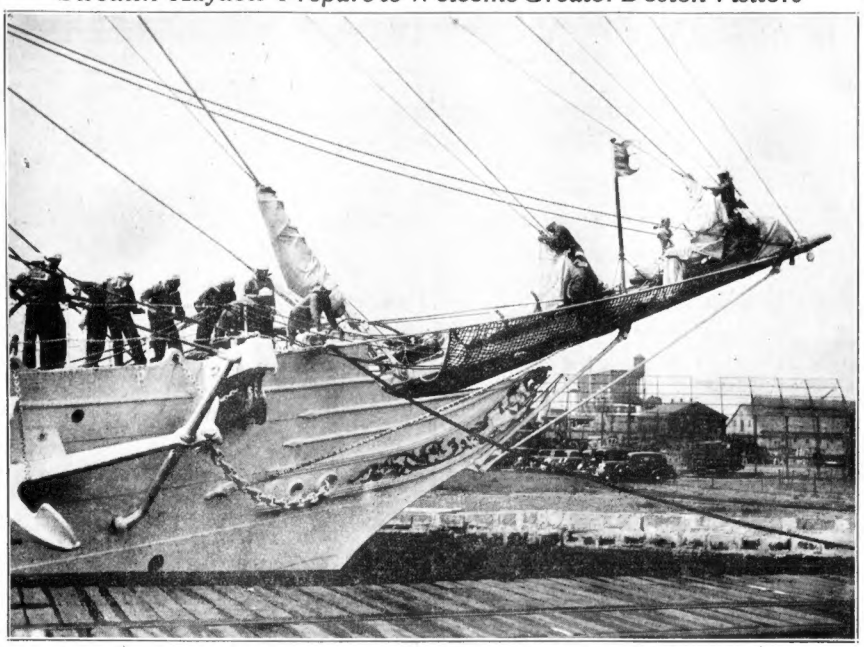
His Truth is marching on! Past the wreckage of our anger, past the litter of our greed, God's Truth, God's Love, God's Land go on forever!

Swedish 'Kaydets' Prepare to Welcome Greater Boston Visitors



The Swedish naval cadets, who are on board the training ship, "af Chapman," anchored at the Charlestown Navy Yard for a stay of five more days, today prepared to welcome visitors. The regular crew of 74, and the training crew of 190 boys, under 18 years of age, were at work all morning trimming up the vessel. This picture shows some of the "kaydets" working on the bowsprit of the large three-masted square rigger, while others are busy with the ropes up forward. KIDNAPERS AIM AT RICH MEN

Los Angeles, Aug 4—Scarcely recovered from the shock of its recent kidnaping, this city rocked today to the revelations of a $60,000 kidnap extortion plot aimed at Edward L. Doheny, multi-millionaire oil man and four other millionaires.

One of the other four is William F. Gettle of Beverly Hills, who was "snatched" in May, recovered his freedom and helped to send to San Quentin for life three of his kidnapers.

The other targets are Ora E. Monette, leading Los Angeles banker; Lloyd Pantages, son the theatrical magnate, and Jack Doyle, millionaire sportsman oil man.

Local police, co-operating with the district attorney's office and the Federal Postoffice Department have been working on the case for several days, it was said.

Cambridge Battles Closing Gas Plant

More than 100 Cambridge citizens will ask Mayor Richard M. Russell to appropriate money to hire an attorney to fight the proposal of the Cambridge Gas & Light Co. to buy its gas from the Boston Consolidated Gas Co.

Buying the gas from Boston the citizens claim will shut down part of the Cambridge plant with a loss of taxes to the city and loss of employment to many residents.

Riot Squad Called for Malden Bout

After the riot squad had been called last night to stop the wild melee between Gil Cross and Jose Firpo at the Malden Arena, Jose Firpo was declared the winner of the third fall.

In the semi-final bout, Al Taylor defeated Gus Bryun in eighteen minutes, one fall to win.

F. R. Starkey's Funeral Monday

Funeral services for Frank Robinson Starkey, of 161 Elm street, Somerville, widely known in Cambridge, who died in his 78th year yesterday, will be held Monday afternoon.

The rites will be conducted at two o'clock in the A. E. Long Memorial Chapel, Beech street, North Cambridge.

'Other Woman' Aids Tragedy

Miss Margaret Crain, 23-year-old music teacher of East Aurora, New York, is being hurried from state police barracks at Wyoming, Pennsylvania, after her visit to her fiance, Robert Edwards, held there in connection with the death of Miss Freda McKechnie. Miss McKechnie, an expectant mother, was found blackjacked to death, clad in a bathing suit. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Samaritan Killed Going to Aid Dog

John Dempsey, 61, of 4 Dahlgren street, Dorchester, is dead today as the result of injuries received when he was struck by an auto on Main street, North Randolph, when going to aid a dog hit by another car.

Edward J. Bynarowiez of North street, Randolph, driver of the car, is under arrest charged with manslaughter.

'Other Girl' Believes Love Tragedy Youth Innocent

By International News Service

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 4—Pretty Margaret Crain, 23, stood by her "Bobbie" today, despite his alleged confession that he is a murderer.

She rallied to the defense of Robert Edwards, 21, a mining engineer, refusing to believe even the admission of the youth himself, that his playing of Freda McKechnie, 26, an expectant mother, was a premeditated plot by which he hoped to solve his own "eternal triangle."

"I would believe Bobbie innocent in the face of any evidence," she cried.

Miss Crain wept as the prosecutor's statement, detailing with painful accuracy how Edwards admitted bludgeoning Freda with a blackjack as she swam unsuspectingly in Harvey's lake was read to Alderman Frank Brown.

EXPRESSES LOVE

She was on the verge of collapse when Alderman Brown held Edwards for court, denying him bail. She cried:

"I love Bobbie.

"I'm here to help him in any way I can and I'll stay until I do."

A few hours before police had permitted the young music teacher from East Aurora, N. Y., to see the youth who confessed his love for her made him a killer.

They embraced in a dingy room at the barracks of the state police.

There, Edwards, who has known little rest since his arrest Tuesday night, told his sweetheart he was the author of Freda's death and that she was soon to become a mother.

But the bonds of love that began several years ago when they were both students at State Teachers College at Mansfield, Pa., held Miss Crain to her "Bobbie."

KILLED WHILE SWIMMING

She was on the verge of prostration as police helped her from the building.

At Edwards' arraignment last night authorities read to the alderman his latest statement of the slaying, a statement they said was at last the truth.

In it they quoted Edwards as discarding any of his previous attempts to convince them Miss McKechnie's death was the result of a sudden impulse, a sudden youthful frenzy.

The statement, as given to Alderman Brown, read in part:

"On Wednesday night Edwards, the defendant, gave a signed statement in which he admitted that he struck the victim, Freda McKechnie, with a blackjack and then dragged her body into deeper water.

"Today, the defendant made an additional statement in which he admits that he planned to kill Freda McKechnie in order that he could marry the other girl.

"He also stated that he had concealed the blackjack in his bathing suit and struck the victim while she was swimming."

THOUGHTS ON OTHER GIRL

The last of Edwards' many statements was made as Freda was being buried a few hours before he was permitted to see Miss Crain, who made a mad automobile dash here from her home in Rochester, N. Y., to be at his side.

Police at the barracks said Edwards never once inquired about Freda or made a request to be allowed to attend the funeral of the girl with whom he had been friendly for four years.

His thoughts were of Miss Crain, the "other woman" in the triangular love affair whose climax so closely resembled the plot of the novel, "An American Tragedy."

Miss Crain and her brother, Rev. Leonard Crain, who accompanied her, will probably start home today. Miss Crain denied stories that she and Edwards were secretly married. Her brother stated there was "an understanding" between the two families.

Swedish Vessel Open to Visitors

The first Swedish naval vessel to visit Boston in 27 years, the cadet training ship af Chapman, will be opened to visitors this afternoon from 2 to 4, at Pier 5, Charlestown navy yard.

Visitors at the ship yesterday were surprised to learn that the age of the cadets aboard begins as low as 14 and must not exceed 18.

Dancers to Wed

Miss Grace L. Reilly, 42 Antrim street, and Harold ("Bud") Murphy, Columbia street, two widely known Cambridge dancers, will be married tomorrow at 3 p. m. The wedding service will be held at St. Mary's Church.

O. O. McIntyre NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

New York, Aug. 4—Riffling through the past in settled years provides many long r tweaks. Last evening a yellowing scratch-j revealed sundry activities of twenty years ago. I took every sort of job that came along and that I kept so many balls in the air at the same time seemed incredible.

O. O. McIntyre

Aside from the desperate effort to make this column walk alone, I was a theatrical, hotel and music house press agent. Sandwiched in were random verse, short stories, articles and a somewhat slazy try at The Great American Novel. A haphazard career of broken bits.

During one auspicious week, a week I did not step out of my hotel room for fear the key-hole would be plugged, I supplied the entire contents of a 36-page house organ along with other chores. Among the pseudonyms I used and which suffuses a faint blush was Donald MacGregor Duprez.

All of this tiddledy was naturally third rate dispersing vitality that meant nothing. But because life was young it seemed pathetically important. Once the slim pickings of free-lancing overwhelmed and I turned to a regular job but there was none. There were depressions in those days, too.

Scattering literary fire is ever hopeless. More than most callings, writing demands singleness of purpose. The late Joyce Kilmer wrote vicariously and feverishly until he went to war. Over there he did much thinking and slow writing and those tedious efforts are the only things of his remembered. The most furiously paced writer of modern times, Edgar Wallace, turned out a dozen mystery shockers annually over a period of years. But the one volume to occupy a permancy was his autobiography, done with care.

A legend of the news-rooms is that panegyric to doom, "The City That Was," by the most excellent reporter, Will Irwin, snatched a few lines at a time from the typewriter while San Francisco reeled in flames against historic hills. I read it recently. The title was magnificent inspiration but the essay no better than Martin Green or a dozen re-write men dash off every day before lighting pipes and dropping around to Joe's. Little of writing that lasts is not painstaking.

Another specious romanza of the editorial shops concerns William Allen White's "What's the Matter With Kansas?" reputedly flotsam filler a foreman plunked into the forms on a dull day. The myth persists it sky-rocketed White into journalistic immortality over night. It was not a remarkable editorial, then or now. White's lasting fame is grounded in years of superb editorializing.

No place in cliffed-in Manhattan seems so spacious, skyey and friendly as Battery Park on a moonlit evening. The vast quiet, relieved only by the whispering seep and swish of the ocean, inspires confidences. O. Henry often carried away gems of philosophy from men who suddenly revealed thoughts on Battery Park benches. Vincent Astor, like many swains tongue-tied over proposal, is said to have popped the question strolling a moonlit strip of Newport's Bailey Beach.

Now and then I hear from the rapidly dwindling commercial travelers, the types who sported a blue and white enameled U. C. T. lapel button and stopped at my Dad's hotel in a Missouri town. They were "knights of the grip" off every Monday on the dinky locals, visiting the same towns, same merchants, week after week, year after year, returning to families every Saturday. As a class they were conscientiously loyal, sober and home-loving. Yet the comic paper and vaudeville joke made them appear life's supremest philanderers, always on the make. There are one thousand and one variants of the traveling man and the farmer's daughter gag.

A drama of the 14th street subway steps and its forlorn beggar. For many years he held forth pencils and mumbled to passersby. One day a gentleman dropped a quarter and hurried on. Ten minutes afterward he returned. "I want to apologize for insulting you," he said. "You are a merchant with pencils to sell. I treated you as a beggar. Please give me my pencils." A few years later the same gentleman appeared at a spruce news-stand blocks away. The owner in handing out a paper and accepting the change remarked: "You don't remember me but I owe you a lot. You made a beggar turn respectable." The beggar of the subway steps!

EX-HUSBAND SUES FOR $100,000

Los Angeles, Aug. 4 — Charging fraud and misconduct against his former wife, Dorothy Devore, screen actress, A. Wylie Mather, wealthy importer, filed suit here to recover $100,000 in cash and property he said he turned over to her at the time of their divorce last Aug. 16.

Mather alleged Miss Devore accused him of misconduct with another woman in Honolulu and that Dan Jacobson, a supposed friend, advised him to let her obtain a divorce. He said he then entered into a property agreement with the actress.

Three weeks after the decree was obtained, Mather charged, he learned Jacobson and Miss Devore had conspired to obtain money and that she concealed from him the fact that she was guilty of misconduct with Jacobson.

BUCKET QUENCHES FIVE-ALARM FIRE

North Adams, Aug. 4—Five alarms here called out the entire fire department of this city for a smudge that was extinguished by one pail of water.

A radio in the home of Silvio Pierropan developed a short circuit and smoke poured forth. Pierropan called to a boy on the sidewalk and asked him to ring in an alarm.

The boy, with great pleasure, ran to a fire box and pulled the hook, no directions. When fire trucks failed to arrive instantly, the boy got worried and pulled the hook four times more in rapid succession.

When he had finished, all the apparatus of the city was on the way to the scene, and in the meantime Mr. Pierropan had put out the fire with a pail of water.

CODY'S HOME GOES ON BLOCK

Beverly Hills, Calif., Aug. 4—Draymen hauled away the last of the late Lew Cody's furniture and personal effects, purchased at an auction to settle his estate.

The movie villain's elaborate Las Tranchas beach home, 30 miles northwest of here, its furnishings and 60x225 foot lot is to be placed on the block today.

A Beverly Hills home and lot, the first sale of which was cancelled because of a misunderstanding as to terms, also will be offered.

EX-WIFE FIGHTS FOR BODY OF VAUGHAN

A suit seeking to have the body of the late Dr. Walter W. Vaughan of Newton transferred from the burial place in Portsmouth, N. H., to a cemetery near Needham was filed in Suffolk Superior Court today by his divorced wife, Mrs. Margaret R. Vaughan.

Mrs. Vaughan set forth in the suit that the body was taken to Portsmouth and buried without her knowledge.

On Monday, according to Atty Francis Juggins, counsel for Mrs. Vaughan, additional legal steps will be taken in contest of Dr. Vaughan's will, which was filed in Middlesex Probate Court yesterday.

The will was written in long-hand on a single piece of paper and was dated July 25, three days before his death, following an operation.

In it he bequeathed all his property to his sister, Miss Lilah Vaughan, an assistant professor in Boston University. He gave no explanation for cutting off his wife and son, but stated he was omitting his son intentionally.

Attorney Juggins declared Dr. Vaughan's divorce had not become final and that Mrs. Vaughan was in fact still his wife. He stated that she is therefore entitled to one-third of the estate, as well as a share for the son.

Girl Pickets Sing in Cells

The strains of the familiar "Prisoner's Song" echoed through the Malden police station, when nine girl pickets, cheered their disapproval of being arrested on charges of loitering.

The girls, together with 14 men, were brought to the station after they refused police order to move from in front of the Gregory & Read wood heel plant at Eastern and Maplewood streets, Malden.

According to police, those arrested were part of a group of 200 members of the United Shoe & Leather Workers' Union from Lynn, who came to Malden to picket the "open shop" policy of the Gregory & Read Co.

Rites Tomorrow for Crash Victim

While doctors at City hospital were fighting to save the life of Warren W. Wood, 31, of Hammondswood road, Chestnut Hill, driver of the machine in which Mrs. Edith Loughman, 31, of Chiswick road, Brighton, met death in a crash, funeral plans for the latter were announced today. Services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in St. Mary of the Hill's church, Milton. Wood is near death with internal injuries and a possible fractured skull.

Johnson, Head of NRA, 52 Tomorrow

Washington, Aug. 4 (AP)—Hugh S. Johnson will observe his fifty-second birthday anniversary tomorrow with the country wondering—as he does—about his future and what it means for NRA. The best guess just now is that he will stay awhile as NRA administrator. NRA is undergoing a transition and there is a conviction in some quarters that perhaps more fundamental changes are coming.

Body of Drowned Fisherman Found

The body of Everett Rutter, 37, of Burt street, Dorchester, was recovered today off the Glades, North Scituate, where he disappeared yesterday in twenty feet of water, while fishing. With him at the time was Douglas White of 4 Dwyer circle, Everett, who notified the coast guard which recovered the body. Rutter was the father of three children.

Hitler Wins Praise and Condemnation From Boston Folk

Hitler—the man whose name is on every tongue in the western world—what is he? Arch villain or a nation's savior?

Boston's answer to the question—if you will make a composite of what the man on the street has to say about it—is a big question mark. Indifference, indignation and high praise—a shrug of the shoulder, harsh words of denunciation and pæans of praise all greeted the Boston Evening American reporter who today asked Bostonians about Hitler.

The answers, as might have been expected, classified themselves readily enough according to the nationality of the speaker. Jews were bitter; Germans inclined to laud, at least to plead for toleration, and Italians pointed with pride to Il Duce—a real dictator.

Some samples follow:

Salvatore Pulvirenti, 70 Cambridge street:

"Hitler ought to go to school to Mussolini and learn something about the fine Italian art of being a dictator. I like Mussolini's government, as do all good Italians, whether they live here or in the old country. Mussolini is a fine man and he has done wonderful things for Italy."

Ralph Dorlando, 61 Cambridge street:

"Hitler is causing a lot of trouble but the little man has no part in all of this. We don't know what it's all about. We should leave it to the big men who know how the wheels go 'round. If I say I like Hitler or I don't like him, it makes no matter—nobody listens to me."

Frank E. Rowe, 68 Copeland street, Roxbury:

"The more I read about Europe these days the luckier I think I am to be an American. Hitler is certainly the big boss wielding the big stick over there, but it seems to me he's skating on pretty thin ice. Every move he makes is hastening a war between the European powers and, inevitably, Japan. Another war will mean the end of civilization."

Frank Rowe

William Megow, Hillside road, Billerica:

"Give Hitler a chance. He is in a difficult spot but is proving daily that he is the man for the job. Don't forget that he has put more than 3,000,000 unemployed back to work. Of course, there are things he has done of which I disapprove but you and I are too far away to know the wherefore and the why of them."

Miss Ida Cohen, 15 Revere street:

"Hitler is a disgrace to Germany and the civilized world. He is so obviously wrong in everything he has done since he assumed the dictatorship that one wonders how long he and Hitlerism can go on."

Ida Cohen

Robert O. Dietrich, 24 Summer street, Roslindale:

"There is no difference between the German treatment of the Jews and our treatment of the Negroes except the Germans don't treat the Jews as badly. Hitler should be commended for the miraculous way in which he has revived the German spirit. He is a great personality, and he has done wonderful things for Germany. Without his leadership, Germany would have turned communistic."

Benedetto DeAngelo, 24 Poplar street:

"Well, as Will Rogers says, all I know is what I read in the papers and, sometimes, I wonder if they get things straight. I say, let Germany and the rest of Europe take care of their own affairs and let the United States mind its business. This country has enough to take care of right here without meddling in the affairs of other countries. All I hope is that we keep out of it."

Benedetto DeAngelo

Alfred Milano, 240 Cambridge street:

"It's been 26 years since I've been in Europe. Over here we don't know who is right or wrong in Europe. We're blind here. All we know is what we read in the newspapers and everybody knows how the newspapers exaggerate."

Anthony Bova, 12 Ashland street, West End:

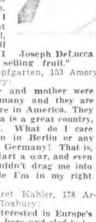
"Hitler ought to take a leaf from Mussolini's book. As dictator, Mussolini continues to use his great power with intelligence and vision. He and his government will continue to live on when Hitler is but a memory."

C. F. O'Donoghue, 111 Amory street, Roxbury:

"My wife, who is a German, thinks Hitler is all wrong, but she won't let me talk for publication. She says you can't tell who's carrying a gun. Anyway, we don't believe in Hitler."

Joseph DeLucca, 11 Charles street:

"He's a smart man that Hitler—no fool could do what he's doing, — but how can he never beat Mussolini. Mussolini is the original. After him they broke the plate. Hitler, now, is just a very, very bad imitation. What do I think might happen? Well, if I could tell you that, I wouldn't be selling fruit."



Joseph DeLucca

Rudolph Hopfgarten, 153 Amory street, Roxbury:

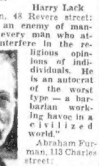
"My father and mother were born in Germany and they are glad to be here in America. They think America is a great country, and so do I. What do I care what goes on in Berlin or any where else in Germany? That is, unless they start a war, and even then they couldn't drag me into it. Not while I'm in my right senses."

Mrs. Margaret Kahler, 178 Armory street, Roxbury:

"I'm not interested in Europe's troubles. I'm here and glad to be here. I came to this country from Holland when I was about a year old and I'm going to stay here. I agree with my husband when he says that if there is another war they can burn the wood and sift the ashes but they won't catch him."

Harry Lack, 3 Malden street, Everett:

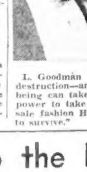
"I predict civil war in Germany within a short period—and the end of Hitler. I don't think Hitler has the mental capacity to rule a nation. He has taken advantage of the death of the Grand Old Man of Germany to assume supreme power, but I foresee a brief reign for him."



Harry Lack

L. Goodman, 48 Revere street:

"Hitler is an enemy of mankind, as is every man who attempts to interfere in the religious opinions of individuals. He is an autocrat of the worst type—a barbarian working havoc in a civilized world."



L. Goodman

Abraham Furman, 113 Charles street:

"Hitler can't last. Intoxicated with power, he is utterly blind to the fact that he is heading for destruction—and soon. No human being could take upon himself the power to take life in the wholesale fashion Hitler has and hope to survive."

CONTRACT OF GARBO NEAR END

By International News Service

Hollywood, Aug. 4 — Tomorrow Greta Garbo will complete her tenth year in Hollywood. In a few weeks she will have finished her eighteenth picture, "Painted Veil," from the story by Somerset Maugham. When that happens her present contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will expire.

So today the old question, "What is Garbo going to do?" is being asked again, a bit nervously, by the producers in Culver City.

As usual, the mysterious Swedish star is keeping her own counsel. Conjecture has it that she will follow her custom of taking an extended vacation in Sweden, and if everything runs true to form, before she departs for Europe, she will sign another contract calling for her return to Hollywood, within the next year.

have attacked children, dogs, cows, even biting automobiles.

Trappers will try to exterminate them over an area of 300 square miles. All wild animals, except deer, may have to be killed.

In England there is no rabies, dogs and other animals not affected.

In Kansas City, the Rev. L. M. Birkhead, a Unitarian, says, "I don't think prayer could do anything to change the weather." He suggests a scientific test, he, with Chief Justice Hughes, Clarence Darrow, H. L. Mencken, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Professor Millikan of cosmic rays, and a number of clergymen whom he names, joining in the experiment.

If all suggested would pray together, it would be an interesting "news picture," whether rain fell or not.

Seven hundred taxi drivers, known as "independent nighthawks," after months of fuming and complaining, form a union for protection. You would hardly guess the nature of one complaint.

Drivers allege that they pick up "souses," which means drunken men, late at night and have trouble in delivering them to their addresses.

This happened to Sol. Leventhal: "My radio went dead the other night and a gang made me sing all the way over to the Palisades."

Taxi drivers, especially all night drivers, see more than anybody else of the wrong side of human nature.

Austria hesitates in the series of "quick hangings." A young man of 24, Edward Hoenisch, found with explosives, but not accused of using them, was tried yesterday and sentenced to be hanged last night. The sentence was changed to life imprisonment.

Not unreasonably. Austrian law says that possession of dynamite is proof of a plan to kill, and the punishment is death.

While our Navy Department talks about cutting down the number of airplanes because "we don't need them in peace," Mussolini, in a country not as rich as this, appropriates $102,840,000 for air defense, and Italy already has an air force that makes ours look like child's play.

2 HURT IN NEW STRIKE BATTLE

By Associated Press

Minneapolis, Aug. 4—Two men were reported shot and wounded by an ice cream truck driver today in another outbreak of violence in the truck drivers' strike.

Leo Holscher, driver for an ice cream company, reported to the national guard that he had fired a shotgun at strike pickets attacking his vehicle. One of the stones, he said, struck him in the back.

Twenty pickets, defying the national guard stationed only three blocks away, swarmed over the truck while Holscher, the driver, was in a nearby building.

He returned to seize a shotgun, squeeze the trigger, and drive the attackers off. Earl Collins and George Schirtz, with minor buckshot wounds, later were admitted to a hospital where they were treated.

Girl Flier Sees Father Shoot Fiance

Margaret Spitz, 18-year-old aviatrix, who is known as "the flying deputy sheriff," was an eyewitness to the shooting that took place in Detroit when her father, Earl Spitz, 42, attempted to break up her romance with Earl Urquhart, 24. Urquhart was shot twice in the back and the girl's father is being held to await the result of Urquhart's injuries. 'Dead' Boy Brought Back to Life by Police Student

By Associated Press

Manhasset, N. Y., Aug. 4—The boy was dead. The doctor said so. The coroner concurred. They called the undertaker.

Everyone in the crowd that gathered on the dock when Stanley Kaduboski, 10 years old, was hauled from Manhasset Bay early last night agreed. No one can stay under water ten minutes and live.

A doctor examined the body, no pulse, no breathing, no movement. The boy was dead.

The coroner came. He shouldered his way through the group gathered about the silent form, and made his professional examination. He executed the papers of death. One cannot drown in Manhasset Bay except there he coroner's papers later to make it official.

HOW POLICE DO IT

The crowd remained, waiting the arrival of the undertaker.

John Symes of the Nassau County police was present. He was none too experienced with tragedies of the sea, but at police school he had paid attention to the course on life saving.

As they waited for the hearse, Symes stepped forward and remarked:

"Let me show you fellows how they taught us to save lives at police school."

The policeman bent over the body of the boy who had ben pronounced dead two hours before. The steady pu-uping of arms; the pushing of chest again. Artificial respiration.

The coroner had completed his report and was waiting patiently for the undertaker. Dr. David Gurin stood nearby, likewise waiting.

CAN PROVE HE'S DEAD

The limp arms of Stanley Kaduboski were being pumped rythmically as Officer Symes warmed up to his exhibition of police school methods of life-saving.

One of Stanley Kaduboski's eyelids fluttered. It wasn't much, but Dr. Gurin saw it and leaped forward. Life!

A few minutes later the boy, holding in his left hand a certificate stating he departed this life at 7:25 p. m., was shaking hands with the coroner.

Attacker Begged Death, Girl Says

PHYSICIAN SHOT, FIREMAN HELD

Vancouver, Aug. 4—Physicians worked frantically here in an effort to save the lives of a 65-year-old fellow physician, shot through the abdomen, and his alleged assailant, suffering from a head wound police said was self inflicted.

Timothy A. Sarwood, 50-year-old Canadian Pacific Railway fireman from Revelstoke, was rushed to the operating room of the General Hospital for an emergency operation, five hours after police said he shot down Dr. A. P. Proctor, Canadian Pacific Railway medical officer, and turned the gun on himself.

Fall From Piazza Kills Maine Man

Rumford, Me., Aug. 4—An attempt to retrieve his cap cost Rufus Myers, 68, his life.

Myers fell to the sidewalk from a second story piazza as he reached over a railing to recover the cap. He died of a fractured skull and internal injuries. The widow and two children survive.

Marie Dressler's Sister Wishes She Was 'Taken'

By ROBERT M. LOW

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

London, Aug. 4 — White-haired, kindly-faced Mrs. Richard Ganthony, 70-year-old widowed sister of the late Marie Dressler, and chief beneficiary in the will of the beloved American comedienne, lamented her in fact that London "should have taken me instead of her. Her work was not done."

Mrs. Ganthony, who has lived in London for the last 30 years, said, in an exclusive interview with Universal Service, that the last thing she is interested in at this time is the money she will receive from the estate. She added:

"Already hundreds of people are besieging me with requests. But I shall only try to carry on the good work of Marie."

Mrs. Ganthony, asked if she planned to travel to America or elsewhere, replied, smiling:

"No, I'm too old for travel.

"The only luxury I will allow myself will be the hire of an automobile once a month."

Discussing her last meeting with her famous sister, she said:

"The last time I saw Marie was three years ago, here in my home."

Mrs. Ganthony was incensed at the report of some London newspapers that she was living in a one-room apartment, and said:

"I have a nine-room house here with all American comforts and I spend my days sitting in a real old American rocking chair."

2ND PLOT ON ROOSEVELT FOILED

bombed. The entire railroad right of way, and all bridges from New London, Ct., to Worcester, Mass., were placed under heavy guard by police, state troopers and federal agents.

SECRET LEAKED OUT

These wholesale preparations could not be kept secret and the reputed plotters failed to move.

Bunnith e dynamite attempt here it was different. No one was apprised of the matter until the sack was discovered on the tracks and at that time the Presidential train was but a couple of hours away.

It was Sheriff George Miles who in' the story in confidence and, like every other secret, it leaked out. He said flatly that officials believed the affair was a plot and not an accidental loss of explosives as some attempted to explain it.

He pointed out that unusual precautions are taken in the matter of handling dynamits and that never were detonating caps placed in the same container as the dynamite itself.

U. S. to Control Power, Roosevelt Asserts

By Associated Press

En route with President Roosevelt to Washington, Aug. 4—President Roosevelt crossed the Pacific Northwest today with an announced policy that the government is going to control natural power resources and expand this section.

Hailed home along the way from his American territorial sea trip by throngs, Mr. Roosevelt proceeded with his unmistakable ability to the federal projects of the Columbia River basin.

APPROACHES KEYSTONE

Today he approached the keystone of the Northwest development—the Grand Coulee power and navigation plan. In this, he expects the giant of the Northwest, the Columbia River, to be thoroughly harnessed and brought under government control.

On the lower banks of the Columbia late yesterday, overlooking steam shovels and trucks at the Bonneville dam site, the President made his first talk after returning to United States soil. He said:

"I don't believe that you can have enough power for a long time to come, and the power that we are developing here is going to be power which for all time is going to be controlled by government."

YARDSTICKS SOLD

The President conceived the power projects as "yardsticks an the people of this country will know they are paying the proper price for electricity of all kinds."

One yardstick, Mr. Roosevelt said, already has been started on the Colorado River. The Tennessee Valley and the Columbia River are numbers two and three. "And the fourth, the St. Lawrence is going to be started," the President promised.

President Roosevelt pointed out that in the northwest there is room for a "vastly increased population," which he thought would be required in the country's progress.

Whirlpool Drags Boy, 6, to Death

Holyoke, Aug. 4—William Dube, six years old, was drowned while swimming in the second level canal here.

The water had been partially drained out, as part of a periodic cleaning process, and the boy was bathing in a 20-foot-deep pool that remained in the bottom. A whirlpool, created by the suction from drain pipes, was believed to have pulled him under the surface.

Letter Clue Leads to Check Arrest

Because he carelessly dropped a personal letter on the counter while attempting to pass an allegedly bad check, Edward Taylor, 57, alias Bliss, of Charendon street, South End, is under arrest today.

A clerk remembered the letter, which resulted in Taylor's identification.

'Bugs' Is Sorry for Dictators

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

The dictator form of government may be autocratic. But it brings quicker results than setting a hay barn on fire.

Any dictatorial person can gain the highest office by grabbing it.

Two weeks later you hold an election to see how the people like it.

If they like it, you accept the nomination. If they don't like it, you still accept the nomination.

It's democracy in reverse. But it must be very lonely for a poor old dictator. Not once in his campaign can he refer to his distinguished opponent.

It all comes out even in the end. Twenty years ago we wrote "The Price of Fame." They named a cantaloupe after Jenny Lind, a French pastry after Napoleon and a herring after Bismarck.

2 OTHER GUYS, SAYS RAFT

employed as a bodyguard for Raft. Gray claims that Raft is right, that the star only acted as a peacemaker and tried to save an investment in plastic surgery that he had made in Gray's nose. Gray asserts:

"I'm the guy that did the fighting."

And since every fighter must have an opponent it comes down to the opponent.

Gray said he believed he knew "the fellow," and named a wealthy Hollywood playboy. The playboy couldn't be reached to affirm or deny his part in the scrap.

There were the other witnesses and they were busy as to the opponent.

In spite of claims, counter-claims and denials, it seems that the affair all started when Raft and Gray sauntered into the Brown Derby for their luncheon.

TWO BEAUTIFUL GUYS

Somebody is said to have called out:

"There go a couple of guys who just had to be beautiful. Raft had his ear detailitioned and Gray had his nose remodeled."

Then the fun began. At least witnesses say that Raft and Gray invited the taunter outside, and he went, eagerly.

George's version of the fight is this:

"I walked out to the parking lot and found my bodyguard, Mack Gray, swinging at a fellow.

"I yelled to Mack to remember his nose. Two days ago I gave Mack a birthday present—it was an operation on his nose to have it straightened and I wanted to protect my investment so I stepped in between the two fellows and separated them.

"That's all the part I had in the affair."

"I DID IT," SAYS GRAY

Now that doesn't agree at all with the version of the witnesses who assert that George swung several rights and lefts, and landed at least one which had power enough to send his opponent spinning.

Gray, however, nobly rallied to Raft's cause. He said:

"I am the guy who did the poling. I saw this guy the other night in a club, and he made some crack at me. He got away before I could nail him. Today I saw him in the Brown Derby and I invited him outside. He was a sucker and came out. I shoved a left in the guy's stomach and a right to his chin and he dropped. The fight was over."

Girls Drinking in Night Clubs, Parents Assert

are licensed to serve men only, Miss Driscoll said.

"These federal complaints plainly indicate the need for greater police supervision of these places. The chief source of trouble is restaurants with music.

"These places where persons of limited means go to make whoopee are the sore spots Some of them badly need to be cleaned up.

"But when the board does something about a place like that, its efforts are ys meet with public opposition. We are charged with being 'kill-joys'."

Miss Driscoll said that restaurants were permitted to have music, but she complained bitterly that it was not being provided for the amusement of patrons in the place, but as a lure to attract persons on the outside.

ACTION INDICATED

That vigorous action will be taken as fast as evidence is gathered was indicated when she said:

"I am particularly interested in young women. I invite the parents of Boston to bring their complaints to the board. If we can get the evidence, we will put these places out of business.

"If I had anything to say about the matter personally, I would bar women from all such premises. I would license all drinking places as taverns—strictly for men only. And I would forbid all drinking on Sunday."

While this storm was brewing over the heads of liquor dealers, the Boston Evening American obtained some of the pleas that caused the federal alcoholic beverage unit to take an interest in the local situation.

One Roxbury mother, nearly frantic with anxiety, wrote that her daughters are being permitted to drink in a licensed Roxbury tavern where men only are legally allowed. Her appeal to the tavern proprietor brought a boast of "police protection," she revealed.

NAMES AND PLACES

A Jamaica Plain father—head of a large family on the verge of charity—named the restaurant in which one of his daughters has sacrificed reputation and job and asked that the navy "shanghai" the proprietor.

"Why do they allow my daughter?—"

"What are we coming to when places are allowed to kill character in girls?..."

"Surely the United States can take some action..."

One worrying mother wrote:

"They talk about bad moving pictures but they are not a patch on what goes on behind stalls in this restaurant..."

Dear—:

FOG HORN SAVES 4 FROM DEATH

A thrilling tale of a narrow escape from death in the open sea, as on ocean liner bore down on four men in the disabled motor yacht Natator, was related at Fish Pier today by Captain Edward Wilson, 55, of 5 Regent court, Roxbury.

The narrow escape from the fate of the crew of the lightship Nantucket, sunk by the liner Olympic several weeks ago, followed a night of fighting choppy seas, sounding fog horns and flying distress signals as the helpless yacht was tossed about.

The Natator was on a swordfishing exhibition and had anchored near the South Shoals lightship.

Captain Wallace said: "About ten o'clock Thursday morning the liner loomed out of the fog bearing down directly upon us."

"Instead of taking to the boats, as ordered by me, our college boys put double strength into the sounding of the fog horns and that action probably saved their lives. The liner changed its course just in time.

G. O. P. CHEERED AT MEMORIAL

Throughout the state today, Republicans took new heart for the fall campaign as they reflected on the rallying cries sounded by their leaders at the Calvin Coolidge memorial exercises at Plymouth, Vt.

Democrats, not one of whom attended the memorial, were glad they hadn't, even though the former President had started his march to the White House from the state capitol on Beacon Hill.

Reasons for Republican and Democratic jubilance were the same. The services commemorated Calvin Coolidge's induction into the presidency 11 years ago, but the orations attending those services were in the main a denunciation of the New Deal policies of the Administration.

"DICTATORSHIP" HIT

Congressman James M. Beck of Philadelphia, re-sorted as a leading authority on the Constitution, was the "keynoter." His was an address condemning President Roosevelt's "dictatorship" and warning that the Constitution would be ended when the people became "so corrupt as to need despotic government."

"We can confidently say that the American people have not yet reached that depth of self abasement," he declared.

"They have accepted much in present governmental policies because of the supposed necessities of an acute depression."

Senator Warren R. Austin of Vermont launched his oration, which preceded that of Congressman Beck, by assailing the administration's "taking from the thrifty and giving to the improvident."

Mrs. Grace Coolidge, widow of the former President, was among the 5000 who gathered on the slopes of the hill near the Coolidge grave. She was tendered two ovations, but did not join the speakers.

Bathers Hug Shore After Shark's City Point Visit

Fearing another visit by a shark, which terrorized bathers at City Point, harbor police and life guards were keeping a close lookout today at New England beaches, while hundreds of bathers confined their activities close to shore.

John J. Sweney, a taxicab owner of East Third street, South Boston, swimming at City Point, was the first to see the huge shark make his appearance when it brushed by his arm with his black fin slightly out of the water.

Sweeney yelled a warning to fellow bathers, and started for shore. The news spread about the beach like wild fire as bathers hurried to land.

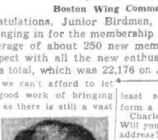
Edward Rogers, lifeguard at the beach, heard Sweeney's shouts and started in a rowboat to his aid, fearing he was drowning. By the time he got into his boat, Sweeney already had reached shore and pointed out to him the fish now floundering about in shallow water, trying to get away.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

Congratulations, Junior Birdmen, on the splendid results you are bringing in for the membership drive! The Boston Wing has an average of about 250 new members for every six days, and we expect with all the new enthusiasts, to edge up nearer New York's total, which was 22,176 on July 27.

However, we can't afford to let up on the good work of bringing in members as there is still a vast difference between our total of 8761 and New York's. Boston and Cambridge members have a right to be proud of the fact that they lead all other cities in Massachusetts. The total for Boston is 2758 and for Cambridge is 293.



Robert Warren

Other states in New England and even outside New England are well represented in the Boston Wing. Here are the totals to date: Rhode Island, 277; Maine, 192; New Hampshire, 187; Connecticut, 139; Vermont, 46; New York, 4; Pennsylvania, 3; California, 2; Illinois, 2; Washington, 2, and Ohio, 1.

Let's see how many new members you can get before September—the more members we have the greater will be the number of activities.

Originality in New Funnybones

We're still receiving plenty of Funnybones copied from magazines and papers, but more interesting are the ones made up by the senders who are coming in at a great rate. Some of the latter are really much better than the ones already in circulation.

Those two one-dollar bills and those 10 pairs of theater tickets are just hanging around headquarters waiting for 12 of you to claim them. So send your entries in, and be sure to put your name, address, age and membership number on each piece of paper.

Also if you have a good clear snapshot of yourself send that in too. If you win we'd like to publish it right along in the same column with the announcement of the winners. The next 12 winners will be announced in tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser.

Thelma Hill, 12, of Central street, Hingham; Elaine Lounie, 15, of 489 Weed street, West Roxbury; and Betty Johnson, 13, of Aaron street, Framingham, are adding their names to the Writers Club list to make sure the postman won't forget them when he brings those letters from Junior Birdmen in distant cities and towns.

Betty and Elaine going to share her letters with her squadron, which is No. 2.

If you want to be up to date and exchange ideas with other members, just drop us a line with your name, address, age and membership number clearly written.

Dedicated to all Junior Birdmen is the poem sent in by Marion Vrakas, 16, of 89 Pleasant street, Lynn, which follows:

"Oh, how I love the sound of planes
As they go zooming over me,
Oh, how I'd love to be in one
To take me far, far—so far away,
To take me away from the earth
Away to spaces unknown.
To discover secrets there science fails.
To know what's behind those fleecy clouds,
To find the home of the wind.
Could to be in a silver-winged plane
To circle around the globe
And see it as we do on the map.
To ride the air waves and get a thrill.
I can't wait until I can fly
My only desire far away."

Questions and Answers Box

Emile Trahan, of Highgate Center, Vt.—We're sorry to hear that you are having trouble. Since the members have paid for the pins, you cannot ask them to turn them in. Remember it's a higher rank than captain. Good luck in building a larger squadron.

Richard Paquet of 46 Green street, Burlington, Vt.—We do not keep extra copies of air insignias on hand. You may purchase back copies of the Boston Evening American. Air insignias 1 through 19 appeared on the following dates: June 16, 19, 21, 23, 26, 28; July 2, 5, 7, 9, 23, 24, 25 26 28 and 30.

Lawrence Bixby of 23 Jones Lane, Stoughton—Too bad you didn't go to the ball game. Your membership card would have let you through. You may purchase another pair of wings for 10 cents. Talk to your school friends, and we're sure you'll be able to get at least seven besides yourself to form a squadron.

Charles Mich, of Wakefield—Will you please send in your street address? You forgot to do this on your application.

Nicholas Acciardo of 863 Middle Highway, Burlington, R. I.—We know how you feel, but we could not prohibit your brother from making a squadron of his own. Of course, a large squadron is more fun.

Advertiser to Show Illustrated Strip

An illustrated strip, authoritative and technically correct, will be one of the features of the half page of news devoted to Junior Birdmen activities to appear hereafter in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, beginning next Sunday, August 12.

This half page section will be the most complete and interesting round-up of features which are holding the interest of all members, so be sure you get the first copy and keep abreast of all the news.

The Junior Birdman whose picture appears today is Robert Warren, 14, of 33 Avery street, Needham Heights.

LONG FORGETS 'WAR' TO FISH

By Universal Service

New Orleans, La., Aug. 4—In the comedy drama entitled "Huey Long vs. T. Semmes Walmsley," the two heroes were supplanted by those in the supporting cast.

The hero of the bill billy country, Senator Huey P. Long, easily took the second role. He went on a fishing trip after Adjutant General Eayan or Fleming, with a fiery decl' ation, defied a court order issued against both him and Long, restraining them from using the National Guard in their fight.

The supporting cast of the other seashore, Semmes Walmsley, have announced that attorneys representing congressional candidates Rowbrich and Blanchard will soon bring action before Judge Bond seeking to having Fleming cited for contempt.

Under the law, if Fleming is found guilty, Judge Bond can sentence him to serve two months in jail and pay a fins of $1000.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

DECENCY GROUP WINS SCREEN CENSOR FIGHT

Boston's League of Decency has won its fight against immoral and objectionable films, it was learned today.

A local board of censorship has been set up and is already functioning. Several films have had scenes cut from them.

This move, contrary to the general principles of the movie industry, is a concession to this territory alone, and was made to avoid immediate invocation of the boycott.

MYSTERY IN HALT

The organization of the League of Decency will only invoke the boycott in the future if the present arrangement fails of its purpose. Meanwhile, it is hoped that the picture producers clean up at production centers.

For the past three days the public at large has been more or less mystified by the apparent cessation of negotiations between Reverend Russell M. Sullivan, S.J., Cardinal O'Connell's spokesman, local head of the Decency League, and Martin J. Quigley, representing the movie men.

But, it became known today, the reason why matters landed a statement after coming to an apparent deadlock was that this Boston board of censorship was agreed upon.

WENT ON VACATION

This "compromise" was a victory for the league and a face-saving arrangement for the Hays organization, and the league leaders didn't want to rub it in" by publicizing the agreement. Therefore both Father Sullivan and Quigley went on vacations.

The league, it also was learned, does not wish to advertise objectionable pictures or drawing up a "banned list" of films. It is trusting to the good judgment of exhibitors and the working of the local censorship group.

SCENES DELETED

For that reason Joseph M. Kirby, Knights of Columbus official, who has been a leader in the Decency League drive, today refused to go into any discussion of the matter, beyond admitting that "a committee" had viewed at least one film before it was publicly shown. This, he said, was approved.

Of the films which had scenes deleted at the behest of the new Boston censorship board, a number are so-called "hits."

They include "Sadie McKee," "Little Man What Now," and "Of Human Bondage." The Gable-Colbert vehicle "It Happened One Night," also came under scrutiny by the board, but as yet no action has been taken in cutting it.

STRIKE PEACE BELIEVED NEAR

By the Associated Press.

Peacemakers on the nation's strike fronts were hopeful today.

Although striking Minneapolis truck drivers rejected terms offered by employers, federal mediators reported they believed a settlement would be reached soon. Governor Floyd B. Olson threatened a tighter military clamp on the city as a means of hastening a truce.

Hugh S. Johnson, NRA chief, remaining in Chicago in an effort to end the stockyards strike, said the prospect for an early settlement was "hopeful."

At Kohler, Wis., Sheriff Ernst Zehms urged that National Guard troops be left in the "model village" until the Kohler Company strike is settled permanently. Governor A. G. Schmedeman has ordered the troops to evacuate Monday, saying they had restored order.

Missing Shoes Death Solved

Oklahoma City, Aug. 4 (AP)—A. N. Ledger, 45-year-old insurance man, who shot fatally Tuesday while on a picnic with Mrs. Marie Walker, a divorcee, Ledger's shoes were missing.

Mrs. Walker told police A. Negro had shot Ledger in a holdup. She was charged with murder.

Andrew Suggs, 25, a Negro, was arrested as a burglary suspect. Detective Clint Miers found Ledger's shoes in the Negro's house. Suggs then confessed, Miers said.

HURLED GLOVE KILLS BOY, 8

Baltic, Ct., Aug. 4—Struck by a catcher's glove, said to have been thrown by one of a group of boys with whom he was playing baseball here, James Richard Briggs, eight, was almost instantly killed. The boy was struck over the heart by the hurled glove and dropped to the ground.

A physician was called but the boy was dead when the doctor arrived.

Sloan Quits Cotton Code

Providence, Aug. 4—Resignation of George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, from that position and chairmanship of the cotton textile code authority, was announced here.

4 BANDITS KILL HUMAN SHIELD

By Universal Service

Chicago, Aug. 4—Four sh*t gun bandits here killed their human shield, John Guth, when they were forced to flee from a saloon in an attempted robbery. A bartender was wounded.

Entering the saloon, where workmen cash their checks, the robbers seized Guth and marched him in front of them at the point of a shotgun.

When one customer refused to obey their command to lie down, and attempted to seize one of the robbers' guns, the quartet fled after shooting Guth through the back. A confederate had a large automobile waiting.

Egan Named NRA Official

Conductor Will Offer Ravel's Masterpiece

By N. F. T.

Patrons of the music to be turned in by Edwin Franko Goldman and his band (WBZ) when 9:30 arrives this evening, may be somewhat surprised to hear the famous march maestro indulge some modern rolls and rhythm with all those big tubas.

Sure enough, the Goldman Band has in mind to feature Ravel's "Bolero," that snaky tropical tune that furnished moving picture material and even brought about a new novelty dance by the same name.

broadcast over NBC facilities from coast to coast, the air presentation due immediately subsequent to the final curtain, probably at 11:30 p. m. For 45 minutes afterward, all America will hear the radio version carried out of Boston.

This is following closely the idea originated a year or so back in connection with the world's premiers of the then new "Ziegfeld Follies" and "Let 'Em Eat Cake" shows, both of which were broadcast over the country from Boston under Evening Americ'an and Sunday Advertiser auspices.

Arrangements for the coming program on Monday are being made by John Clarke, WBZ program chief and Walter (Hap) Myers, New England NBC executive. Such personalities as Bert Lahr, Ray Bolger, Frances Williams and Luella Gear are to be featured.

DEALERS DOINGS

With the advent of marked short wave enthusiasm, much interest is abroad with regard to new models receiving set design. Radio dealers from all parts of New England have announced plans for a pre-view and advance showing of the latest loudspeaker designs, to take place at the Hotel Statler on August 21 and 22. An elaborate display of every known make of radio will be on view for two days and nights.

PLAYWRIGHT'S SON WRITES EVELYN VENABLE FEATURE -:- NEW FILMS AT MET, STATE

Young Anthony Veiller Finishes 'Florence Nightingale'; Father to Produce the Picture

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service
Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Aug. 4—Like father, like son, the sages who hand down our proverbs say. Anthony Veiller, son of Bayard Veiller, famous playwright and scenarist, has just completed "Florence Nightingale" for Evelyn Venable. And here is an interesting situation. Bayard will produce his son's play for Paramount.

In discussing Miss Venable, one of the head men at Paramount says that she is going to be groomed for stardom. Seems the pretty daughter of the Cincinnati professor, is just what the doctor ordered to help cure the censorship troubles. "Florence Nightingale" will not only deal with the life of the woman responsible for the founding of the Red Cross but in addition there will be spectacular Crimean War scenes.

Louella O. Parsons

Don't sing "horses, horses" to Jimmy Dunn if you meet him. He is apt to faint dead away. Jimmy never has been very friendly with horses. In fact, he is like a lot of people I know. If he never rides a horse again it will be soon enough. But he has to play a New York mounted policeman in "Bright Eyes," his next picture with Shirley Temple, and, like it or not, he has to ride. Spencer Tracy who owns a stable, has come to Jimmy's rescue and loaned him a couple of tame ponies and now Jimmy is trying to ride, hoping for the best.

Interesting is the plan of Warner Brothers to surround Dolores Del Rio with the best cast possible and to star her only in special stories. "La Calleute," her next picture, a musical with a Mexican background is a compliment to Senora Del Rio Gibbons), she will probably have Francheot Tone as the lead. He owns Warners one more picture and the plan now is to put him in the cast with Miss Del Rio and Ricardo Cortez. Dolores who will not be able to go to Mexico City for the opening of "Du Barry" plans to go later, taking her husband, Cedric Gibbons, for his first view of the home town she hasn't seen for nine years.

Chatter in Hollywood

Rumor is current that Elissa Landi will say yes to her persistent suitor, Abraham Chasins, before many months. He is her house guest again. He also visited her last year. A musician, he combines the practical with the artistic by advising Miss Landi in her business ventures. He has been seated by her side in court day after day and 'tis said that she listens to his advice and acts accordingly.

A Line or Two

George Barnes' inscription on his gift to Joan Blondell at the baby shower, given her by Orry Kelly, was received with much laughter. He wrote "from your baby to my baby for our baby" on a bassinet which he presented to his wife. The June Knight-Paul Ames romance is so hot that June has turned down three New York stage offers just to keep Paul, who prefers Hollywood, by her side. I call it a big honor that the Hollywood Bowl committee has bestowed upon Nathaniel Finston, head of the Paramount music department.

Snapshots of Hollywood

ANNA MAY WONG'S papa and mamma sailing for China Saturday; ANNA sending them back to the land of their fathers on a holiday; LILA LEE scheduled to appear in a New York stage play, "Old Folks at Home"; Apache costumes being snapped up by those who will wear them at ROSIE DOLLY'S and IRVIN SETCHER'S Apache party Saturday night; TOM BROWN who is that popular with the younger generation, escorting ANNE SHIRLEY to the Russian Eagle fashion show; at the same table, JACKIE COOGAN with his girl friend, TOBY WING; now that ALFRED VANDERBILT, JR., has left town, JACKIE is head man in the fascinating MISS WING'S life; WILLIAM COLLIER, SR., JOSEPH CAWTHORN, LEW FIELDS, WILLIAM A. BRADY, all stage reminiscences, going into a huddle at the FIELDS-RAY party; the CAWTHORNS host at a buffet supper party; BILL BRADY; MADGE EVANS supplying herself with lightweight luggage to fly to New York; MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN off by plane to Victoria; she meets JOHN FARROW and he goes on to Chicago and she to Quebec where she sails "alone" for Ireland; FARROW says business keeps him from meeting his fiancee's parents; RICHARD DIX tanned a deep brown, discussing his proposed auto camp tour; CHARLES LAUGHTON pounds dinner lunching at a Beverly cafe. That's all today.

Pensive Moments Between Acts

Ray Bolger and Dixie Dunbar, two of the many stars of "Life Begins at 8:40," which has its world premiere at the Shubert Monday night, contribute a lot of pep, personality and pulchritude to the big John Murray Anderson musical revue. But they have their serious moments, you'll notice. Ray's from Boston, and Dixie from Atlanta, Ga., suh!

"Stamboul Quest," Vaudeville Program at Orpheum

Myrna Loy in her first starring picture, "Stamboul Quest," a story of international intrigue and romance, is the screen fare at Loew's Orpheum with an excellent bill of vaudeville headlined by Buster West in "The Fleet's In."

In "Stamboul Quest," the heroine is the notorious Fraulein Doktor, ace of the German secret service, designed to trap a Turkish commander, who sells the military secrets of the strategic fortifications at Dardanelles to the highest bidder.

The persistence and presence of an impetuous and likeable young American doctor, played by George Brent, considerably complicates matters and a fast moving and thrilling story brings the picture to a highly dramatic climax.

"The Fleet's In," stars Buster West, the sailor, together with Charles Eaton and Sandra Wood in a hilarious music and comedy skit. Adair and Richards in "Nights of Love," Rio and West, Bobby Cook, and Fred Weber in a highly amusing ventriloquist act, are also billed on the vaudeville program.

Young and Old Stars Shine In Boston

By ANN AMES

A member of the Weidman group in "Life Begins at 8:40" is Willem Gerard, a name which fails to reveal that he's the son of H. W. Van Loon, whose most widely read book is probably "The Story of Mankind." While father Willem turned to literature, the young man chose the stage, and studied and appeared in Vienna under Max Reinhardt. His mother was Elizabeth Ingersoll Bowditch, so he should certainly be more than at home here.

A young lady of many talents comes to town with "Life Begins at 8:40," at the Shubert Monday night. She's Sally Gibbs, and she's not only one of Philadelphia's finest, as the social register will tell you, but she has just published her first book of poems, "Beauty for Ashes." The title may sound a bit macabre, but Sally is a deep thinker. Her father is George Gibbs, well known author and scenarist, and her brother Harrison is winning his own laurels as a young sculptor. Sally graduated from Bryn Mawr two years ago, appeared as a dancer with the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company and with the Mordkin Ballet, but sings, too, which is what she's going to do in "Life Begins at 8:40."

Jean Harlow Stars on State Screen

By JOYCE DANA

She's a good girl, "The Girl from Missouri." The newest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film starring Jean Harlow, which opened at the State yesterday, conclusively proves that platinum blondes may continue to be as alluring as ever, if only they convince themselves and the audience that the reward of virtue comes only with a wedding ring.

Originally titled, "Born to be Kissed," and deferring to the recent crusade by changing its title, Anita Loos and John Emerson have written the story of the girl who ran away from home to be good for a change.

As Eadie—was a lady—Miss Harlow sets out for New York and a millionaire husband. From a night club floor she progresses to a pent-house party, and determines to snare the fabulously wealthy P. C. Paige. But Paige is a wise and wary widower, and Eadie and her less discriminating girl friend, Kitty, are forced to follow his trail to Palm Beach.

There Tom Paige, Jr., steps into the picture, and Eadie makes the grave error of falling in love with him. Even in the face of diamond bracelets, Eadie is adamant, holding out for matrimony or nothing. Paige senior objects strenuously, and even resorts to framing the girl his son loves to break up the romance.

Jailed on a trumped up charge, Eadie, being something of a fighter, swears revenge, and to the evident satisfaction of the audience at the State yesterday, she gets it.

Miss Harlow, looking very lovely indeed, has a chance to throw a few tantrums, which she does exceedingly well, and Franchot Tone as her big heart interest, brings considerably more realism to the role of an ardent lover than he has ever achieved before. Lionel Barrymore, looking a bit strange in a role at odds with the querulous and tacky old gentleman he usually plays, appears as the stern parent.

Patsy Kelly has a penchant for uniforms, either doormen or cops—is refreshing and amusing as Kitty, and in smaller capacities Lewis Stone, Hale Hamilton and Alan Mowbray are in the cast. The stamp of Mr. Joseph Breen's approval is on "The Girl from Missouri," and you'll like it, too.

Other screen subjects on the program include a Fitzpatrick Travelogue, "Cruising the South Seas," a Charlie Chase comedy and the current news reel. Ralph Nyland, radio songster, has been held over for a second week.

Peek on Vacation Trip in Bay State

Washington, Aug. 4—George N. Peek, foreign advisor to the President, left for a week's vacation in Massachusetts.

Officials in his office here said they knew of no plans made by Mr. Peek to visit Rio De Janeiro with the new Brazilian clipper plane that will be put in South American service by the Pan American Airways on August 16.

Burlesque to Open

The opening bill for Boston's fall burlesque season has been announced, with Billy Arlington and his famous burlesquers scheduled for the initial presentation at the old Howard early in September. Arlington is an old-time favorite, and Manager Al Somerby announces that he will inaugurate a season of hit shows for theater-goers.

The Park theater will likewise re-open within the next few weeks, with continuous burlesque and elaborate revues. Max Michales, manager for the Minsky interests, announced that extensive renovations are in progress both back stage and in front of the house at the Park, and that a greatly expanded circuit will permit the showing in Boston of some of the biggest headline acts on the burlesque wheel.

At Norumbega Park

There are all varieties of summer pastimes and amusements at Norumbega Park, with record crowds on hand each evening. In addition to free motion pictures, there is the zoo, and the animal circus, the latter event held twice daily, with performing ponies, Alaskan dogs, bears, monkeys, a baby lion and bucking mule, and other animal attractions.

There is dancing every evening, and cool and comfortable facilities for picnic parties.

"Goldbergs" and Krolsonn at Met

By HARRIS MORGAN

Those lovable friends of millions of radio listeners, "The Goldbergs," moved in on Boston yesterday at the Metropolitan Theater. Mollie and Jake, Sammy and Rosie, with one or two neighbors in the background, all came to life, in a sketch that is full of those homely humors and philosophies that have made the progress and problems of the Goldbergs an institution of the American home.

Mrs. Gertrude Berg created the Goldbergs, and plays the role of Mollie, the kindly mentor who soothes Jake's ruffled temper, is arbiter for the children's quarrels, and keeps peace and happiness in the modest little home.

The Goldbergs top an excellent new program at the Met, which has for its screen feature "The Man With Two Faces," starring Edward Robinson G. Robinson, and adapted from the stage success "The Dark Tower," by Alexander Woollcott and George S. Kaufmann. Since Mr. Woollcott admittedly loves nothing better than delving into mysteries and murders, and Mr. Kaufmann knows all the tricks of dramatic suspense, and since the volatile Mr. Robinson is pretty much of a genius at characterization, there results an extremely well constructed, consistently entertaining picture.

Robinson has the role of Damon Wells, one of New York's leading actors, whose lovely sister, Jessica, is driven from the same profession by her sadistic husband, Stanley Vance. This evil fellow, with his "slimy charm," turns up on the eve of the production of a new play which will once more restore Jessica to health, happiness and fame.

The splendid stage presentation features Moore and Revel, dancers who will appear in the new Ziegfeld Follies, Red Donahue and the trained mule, Uno, Roy Smeck, radio's wizard of the strings, Barr and Estes and the Elida Ballet.

By Betty Alden

A LITTLE BIT OF THIS and that from here and there . . . The Francis A. Hardings of Chestnut Hill must be preparing for the wedding of Elizabeth to Dr. James Mitchell Parker of Portland, Maine, because the paper-hanger answered the telephone when we called up today . . .

Miss Grace Gelinas and Ellery Clarke, Jr., are hoping to get married this fall . . . Mr. Clarke's friends are pleased to hear that he is back on the job after a long and serious illness this spring . . . which delayed wedding plans. Miss Gelinas is going on to New York this week for a brief round of gayety with friends from Detroit, where she lived before coming to Boston. She plans to keep busy producing amateur plays as soon as the summer season is over . . . she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gelinas of Newton.

ELIZABETH HARDING

Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott (Happy Hannah) of Milton is in New York until Monday visiting her future daughter-in-law, Mary Elizabeth Weld, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Weld of Riverdale, N. Y. Her son, Samuel, Jr., Harvard '33, is toiling in a Boston bank so he can marry Mary . . .

Mrs. George Timmins of the Groton Hunt Club is making plans for a field day at the club the Sunday before Labor Day . . . They are arranging a large horse and dog show and morning hunt with breakfast and everyone from near and far is invited.

A bevy of debutantes and post-debutantes will usher at Mrs. Larz Anderson's play, "Freedom," on Monday night . . . another group will be in the ballroom scene of 1860. Among those will be Polly Gardiner, niece of Mrs. Anderson, Natalie Folsom, Helen Bradshaw, Lansdale Watson, Susan Dalton, Elizabeth Watson, Mary Brown, Lillian Munson from California, Ruth Williams, Martha Rogerson, Frances Fabian, Phyllis Forbes, Helen Shepard, Rose Gordon Stearns, Jane Bogardus and Nancy Shaw . . .

Gay Party at Sky Garden

GLIMPSED AT THE SKY GARDEN last week were Mr. and Mrs. Sam Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Leland of Southboro and their charming daughter, Luisita, Mrs. Henry Parsons King and a large party dancing under the stars. Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Parker, Jr., the beautiful Mrs. Parker very chic in red and white checked chiffon, Miss Margaret Coburn Smith with a swain, a few summer bachelors whom we did not SEE, Henry Bohlen and a titian-haired lady, which is all right, because his lovely divorced wife was remarried last week to Mr. Carlton Pike, from his picture a bit handsomer than Henry . . . Mr. and Mrs. John Hoar with General and Mrs. Brown, parents of Mrs. Hoar . . . it is gay rendevouz and when Sammy sings "You'd Have Done the Same" even the stars twinkle in the velvety sky . . . he also remembers that we still thrill to "Lover Come Back to Me" . . . which is very pleasant. The Rob Roys are as potent as ever, we will add in passing . . .

Commander Herbert Kays, U. S. S. Chicago, if we are right, which came into Marblehead yesterday, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson on board . . . the party included Commander and Mrs. Harlow Kays, brother of the former. The Andersons have traveled to the far corners of the earth and the Kays are old friends . . .

We are glad to hear that the Swedish training ship is in . . . we went Swedish in a big way on the Kungsholm last season, particularly on the occasion when a handsome Swede announced quite seriously that we had EET . . . we spent most of the cruise trying to find out what Swedish IT was . . .

We hear that Mrs. Adelaide Whitman is enjoying cocktail parties with her two daughters, Nancy and Rose, in England . . . the girls will be very proud of their step-mother, Mrs. Hendricks Whitman when she plays at the Friday afternoon Symphony concert this winter . . . the Hendricks have a house in Greenwich, Ct.

There is much entertaining at the Gaspar Bacons at Woods Hole for Robert Toland, Mrs. Bacon's brother, and children, who are visiting them from Long Island.

Mrs. Wood Taylor Entertaining

MR. AND MRS. HOMER GAGE are visiting Mrs. Wood Taylor at Hyannisport, where there will be much entertaining in their honor.

From Cohasset we hear that "Dick" Waters will shake off home ties for a while as he has a job in Syracuse, N. Y. Mother is busy giving good-bye parties for him. Cynthia and Sally Waters, daughters of Mrs. Bertram Waters, are visiting Aunt Mattie, Mrs. Richard Waters, for the week . . .

Mrs. Homer Gage

Sorry we couldn't go down to Danvers for the hill-billy party at the James Putnam Lodge, for the benefit of Anna Osgood House, last evening . . . we're afraid we wouldn't find it in the dark or that we would have such a good time we wouldn't find our way back for the deadline . . .

Children's Hospital Fair

CHARITY IS AGAIN ENGROSSING the attention of the Marblehead colony. Mrs. Stephen Paine, whose charming home on The Neck perches on the very edge of harbor-side cliffs, has loaned her estate for a Children's Hospital Fair on Tuesday afternoon, August 14.

Mrs. Amos F. Breed is serving as general chairman. Three members of the hospital's welfare committee, Miss Constance Learned, Mrs. Donald Falvey and Mrs. Robert C. Terry, are among her aides. Miss Learned will share with Mrs. Falvey and Mrs. Paul D. Rust, Jr., the responsibilities of the grab table.

In point of fact it will not be a table but an ingenious contraption from which all sorts of mysterious packages will emerge to delight young hearts. Without ice cream and ponies no fair is worthy of the name. But Miss Margaret Emerson and Miss Anne Upton will see that the patrons are well supplied with cool refreshments while Mrs. Roger Hale and Mrs. Edward Rudd will take charge of the pony rides.

Mrs. Paine's broad porch is to be turned over to those preferring the quiet of an afternoon at bridge. Miss Jane Bogardus (Breakers 2625) will take reservations. Punch and cake will be served by Mrs. Preston Stephenson and Mrs. George Brown [illegible] Miss Leonora Kimball lends efficient assistance.

TRIO ACTIVE IN NORTH SHORE SOCIETY ACTIVITIES THIS WEEK

ANNA HOBBS CLEMENTINE HOBBS

A CHARMING SET of twins who find the social activities of the fashionable North Shore very engrossing especially when they are called upon to be flower vendors at an important benefit. They are Anna and Clementine Hobbs, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Hobbs of Brookline and Nahant and the sub debutante sisters of Miss Melora Hobbs who will step over the social threshold this autumn.

PATRICIA PRESTON

MISS PATRICIA PRESTON, known to her intimate friends as Patty, is the daughter of Mrs. Harold G. Cutler of Beacon street and Swampscott. Because of her winning personality and attractive appearance she is frequently asked to be a mannequin when society walks the gangplank of fashion to reveal the latest styles for the fall debutante or her mother. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Miss Faith Lamont to Wed Mr. Graeme MacLeod

MR. AND MRS. HAROLD B. LAMONT of Lexington and Middleham, Me., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Faith Lamont, to Mr. Graeme MacLeod, son of Judge and Mrs. Frederick J. MacLeod of 36 Salisbury road, Brookline.

Plans are being made for an early October wedding.

MARBLEHEAD'S EASTERN YACHT CLUB is turning over its spacious harborview porches to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children for a benefit bridge party on Wednesday, August 15. Several directors of the Salem branch (whose work extends to the Marblehead district) are joining with members of the summer colony in arranging this affair.

The party is scheduled for the morning hours and may be extended into a luncheon party by those who wish.

Miss Edith Fabens is general chairman of the committee and reservations may be made through her at Washington Square, Marblehead.

Mrs. Myles Standish, Mrs. John E. Yerxa, and Mrs. Robert C. Terry are among Miss Fabens's assistants as are Mrs. J. Foster Smith, Mrs. Lewis Doane, Mrs. Albert Goodhue, Miss Gertrude Nelson, Mrs. Joseph Newmark, Miss Annie Pomeroy, Mrs. Marquis Smith, Mrs. Arthur Swasey and Mrs. Alvah Thompson.

Wedding Date Set

SATURDAY, SEPT. 8th is the date set for the marriage of Miss Pauline Hanna Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Moore of Hollow Hill Farm, Convent, New Jersey, to Mr. Frederick M. Dearborn, son of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick M. Dearborn of New York.

The ceremony will be performed in Grace Church, Madison, New Jersey, with a reception to follow immediately at the Moore's estate. Miss Moore, who is a granddaughter of Mrs. William H. Moore of Prides Crossing is well known in Boston for her success as an exhibitor in all the important horse shows.

Mr. Dearborn has many Boston friends, having graduated from Harvard in 1933. He and Miss Moore will make their home in Cambridge after their wedding trip while he completes his course at the Harvard Law school.

MRS. J. MOTT HALLOWELL has returned to her Chestnut Hill home for the month of August, having leased her estate in Wianno. For the last two weeks of July she had as her guests in Wianno, her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Heckscher of Philadelphia.

Sales Planned for Resorts

MAINE RESORTS will be the scene the coming week of a number of sales and exhibitions in the interests of the Disabled Ex-Servicemen's Exchange of Boylston street, whose purpose is to market the handiwork of disabled World War veterans.

Mrs. Charles F. Russell will open her magnificent estate "Adams Place" at Castine on Monday and she will be assisted in carrying out the exhibition and sale by Mrs. Edward W. Hutchins of Beacon street, who is now occupying her summer residence "Pir Cones Farm" at Castine.

On Tuesday the facilities of Whitehall Inn at Camden will be at the disposal of the Exchange through the courtesy of Mr. Ralph B. Wilson. Another sale will be sponsored on Wednesday by Lady Lewis at Winter Harbor.

Primrose Cottage, at Bar Harbor, the snug summer home of Mrs. Timothee Adamowski of Chestnut street, will be opened for a sale on Thursday, Aug. 9. Mrs. Adamowski will preside over this event, and also over the exhibition on Friday which will be held in the village at Bar Harbor with the co-operation of the American Legion Auxiliary Unit.

Miss Ivory, Aristos Club Head, Is Married in Allston

AN OUTSTANDING WEDDING today was the marriage of Miss Assumpta Marie Ivory of Allston, president of the Aristos Club of Boston, to Mr. John Aloysius Power of Worcester at St. Anthony's Church in Allston at 9 o'clock.

Trailing white satin and tulle formed the bridal costume and her only attendant was Miss Pauline Smith of Brighton. Mr. William J. McCann, of Worcester served as best man. Two relatives of the couple performed usher duties, Mr. Paul Power, a brother of the groom, and Mr. Alban McInnis, a cousin of the bride.

Miss Ivory was graduated from the Boston Academy of the Notre Dame.

A reception at the Puritan Sky Garden followed the ceremony with a wedding trip to Asbury Park, N. J., and a cruise to Bermuda to be their honeymoon.

Mr. Power is associated with the New England Telephone Company in Burlington, Vt., where they will make their future home.

Dr. and Mrs. M. E. McGarty of Beacon street, have closed their home and have taken "Wayside," home of the John C. Ellsworth's on University Lane, in Manchester Cove, with their young son, Bobby, for the balance of the season. This is their second season on the North Shore and they are being missed from the Scituate colony where they have usually summered.

Much interest is being shown in the swimming meet between the Swampscott and Magnolia beach clubs for which Mr. Lynch and Mr. Fleming instructors at the two clubs have made elaborate arrangements. August 15 has been set as the date, with the Magnolia Club as host. An interesting day is expected, with a splendid program of sports.

Among those who entertained at luncheons during the past week at the Magnolia Club were Mrs. William J. McKenna of Manchester and Miss Susan Williams of Magnolia.

Farther down the shore at Bass Rocks are Mr. and Mrs. James F. Fay in the Farmer cottage with their young son. This is a departure from their usual summer at Rockport.

On Monday, Miss Martha Donnan of Wellesley arrived at Briar Neck, to occupy "The Sumacs" for the remainder of the summer . . . also at Briar Neck is Mrs. Natalie B. Halloran, who has rented the spacious Comins house.

"Communism" will be the subject of a lecture by Mrs. Francis E. Slattery, former president of the League of Catholic Women and prominent summer resident of North Scituate, to be given on Aug. 8, at the Scituate Country Club. This is the second in the series of four, sponsored by the Betterment Club of that section. The proceeds of these lectures will be used for the restoration of the old cemetery at Kent[illegible]

Given in Marriage

By Adele Garrison

Madge, telling Veritzen the alibi prepared for Avis Arlen, suspects that he knows the truth about the "Missing Letter."

CHAPTER 106

AS LILLIAN lounged lazily out of the study, after her promise to aid me in the attempt to induce Philip Veritzen to modify his plans for the flamboyant, expensive honeymoon he was engineering for Noel and Mary, I felt my spirits rising unaccountably. Lillian had warned me not to be too hopeful, nor too abrupt. But the very fact that she had promised to aid me in talking to Mr. Veritzen, instead of vigorously protesting my saying anything to him on the subject, made me more hopeful of success in my scheme than a dozen more cordial offers of aid from other sources would have done.

HER PROMISE TO AID AVIS

Upon one thing I was determined. I would say no words of the honeymoon plans during my coming interiew with my old employer in which I knew he meant to probe my knowledge of Avis Arlen's activities with a relentless hand. I would need all the finesse and resourcefulness I could muster to deal with him, and I leaned back in my chair with the futile wish that I never had promised to shield the girl whom Hugh Grantland had described as "worthless."

I must have been more exhausted than I realized, for the next thing I knew Mr. Veritzen's mellifluous voice was saying. "Poor child! It's a shame to waken you," and I opened my eyes to see him smiling sympathetically at me.

"Oh!" I exclaimed in confusion, attempting to rise. But I found myself put back in my seat with a firm hand.

"Why all the activity?" he asked quizzically, then added meaningly:

"Your trip to Patchogue must have fatigued you greatly."

I stared at him for the fraction of a second. Then my wandering wits came back to me and I said quietly:

THE QUESTIONING

"It did. This ankle has taken more out of me than I realized, but I could not refuse Miss Arlen when she wished so much to see me."

It was his turn to be astonished. He had not expected me to admit at once that I had gone to Patchogue for the purpose of meeting Avis Arlen, and his eyes were suddenly wary.

"Will you think me very crass?" he asked finally, "if I ask you to tell me why Miss Arlen wished so much to see you? Believe me, I am not asking idly. There is something vital at stake."

"I do not think I am betraying any particular confidence in telling you why she wished to see me," I said with calculated hesitation. "She was very frank and open about her reason for summoning me and she did not bind me to any secrecy whatever. You perhaps observed last summer that Mary and Avis were not upon the best of terms?"

TWO GIRLS IN LOVE

"Two girls in love with the same man are not apt to have any particular affection for each other," he said. "Perhaps that is a conceited remark for Noel's father to make, but it is warranted, surely, in Mary's case—" He stopped, with a quizzical look.

"As she is to marry him in two days," I said, "I think you are justified in thinking she is in love with him."

I hesitated no longer, but plunged into the alibi for Avis which Hugh had concocted for me, and to which I had drilled the girl over the telephone.

"If did not want to come out here," I explained, when I had finished telling him the fabricated tale of Avis Arlen's wish to stage a dramatic reconciliation scene with Mary. "Of course, I did not know what she wished from her talk over the telephone. She only said it was terribly important that she see me. But I had an intuition that she meant something of the sort, and I was unwilling that Mary should be upset by any such performance. Therefore, I told her that I would meet her at Patchogue."

VERITZEN'S SUSPICIONS

There was a distinctly quizzical look in Mr. Veritzen's eyes, and I had something of the sensation of a mouse under the paws of a malevolently playful cat.

"Quite right," he said quickly. "Mary, of course, should be guarded from any annoyance at this supposedly happiest time of her life. But tell me; had you no suspicion, at the time Miss Arlen was telling you this story, that she was indulging in what we know as "pulling the wool over your eyes—that what she really wanted was something far different?"

A little bell of warning rang deep down in my consciousness. "I don't quite understand you," I evaded.

"Have you conjectured how I knew that you had met Miss Arlen at Patchogue?" he countered.

Hairline Satins

WHITE hairline stripes trace a faintly irregular path down the newest tailored brown and black satin dresses. Crisp white falls or angelskin collars and cuffs form a smart alliance with the white stripes. White pumps and a white satin beret are suggested for summer wear with these frocks, while matching black or brown oxfords and a felt hat will make them perfect Fall outfits.

What the 1934 Flapper Is Wearing

By Prunella Wood

THE MATTER of making American girl fashions for American girls is forging ahead nicely in the capable hands of some of the girls themselves. One young designer who threw her bonnet into the style ring just a year ago is back with a lot of chic new bonnets and other things for us this year, and three of her pets are sketched herewith.

Aside from the shadow slim silhouettes which are a great stamp with this youthful designer for youth, there is a nice assortment of hardware displayed in her collection. Take a peek at her Robin Hood model below, and you will note that an archer's bow and arrow (in bronze) is at belt and collar. Metal buttons like miniature ash trays adorn other coates models amusingly; copy book eyelets and rings, and big pen nibs, two inches long and gilt-washed, are also to be had in lieu of buttons.

The two-piece frock made of contrasting colors or fabrics is to be very good this season, and it is one which lends itself to jaunty young figures. Such darning color schemes are possible in it that all alliances with an old-fashioned skirt and blouse is lost in these models. Take a butcher boy smock with tucked in front, made of periwinkle blue crepe, and poise it over a tobacco brown skirt.

Left—Robin Hood's forest green jerkin, plus a skirt, in wool crepe. Mittens, cap and belt of russet velvet.

Right—A double brimmed, double duty frock. The skirt is dark blue tree bark wool; the dark book metal rings and eyelets.

Center—An orange and brown plaid wool blouse matches it, and is fastened with copy jacket with a brown skirt. White sateen blouse.

Serve Dinner Out of the Ice Box

By Martha Lee

"PUT THE DINNER on the ice" is a wise kitchen slogan when heat waves are in season. A tempting menu that can be prepared in the cool of the morning and served from the refrigerator at night schedules fruit cocktails, a cold meat loaf with a tomato salad, and for a chilled dessert—ice cream or a fruit pie that doesn't require cooking.

Here is an economy ice cream recipe that "makes itself" in your automatic refrigerator. Or, if the family is in a mood for pie, here is a tempting unbaked variety that can be achieved in either an automatic refrigerator or an ice box.

VANILLA COCOANUT ICE CREAM

2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk
½ cup water
½ cup cocoanut, finely chopped
1½ tsps. vanilla
1 cup whipping cream

Blend sweetened condensed milk, water, finely chopped cocoanut and vanilla. Chill. Whip cream to custard like consistency and fold into chilled mixture. Pour into freezing pan. Place in freezing unit. After the mixture has frozen to stiff mush (one to two hours) remove from refrigerator. Scrape mixture from sides and bottoms of pan. Beat two minutes. Smooth out and replace in freezing unit for one hour or until frozen for serving. (Two to five hours, total freezing time.)

APRICOT CREAM PIE

1 1-3 cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk.
1-6 cup lemon juice.
1 cup sliced apricots, fresh or canned.
1-2 cup whipping cream.
2 tbsps. confectioners' sugar.
Vanilla wafer pie crust.

Blend together sweetened condensed milk and lemon juice. Add sliced apricots. Pour into an eight-inch pie plate lined with vanilla wafer pie crust. Cover with whipped cream sweetened with confectioners' sugar. Chill before serving. (No cooking is necessary because the sweetened condensed milk are milk and sugar already cooked down to a rich creamy mixture that thickens upon the addition of lemon juice to give a smooth lemon custard filling.)

With Right Shade of Powder, It Conceals Blemishes; Fruit Oil Freshens Skin

(POSED BY DOLORES DEL RIO)

By Juliet Shelby

YOU DON'T HAVE TO PIN diamonds in your hair, or paint your nails the color of fire-engine-red to capture a bit of the autumn glamour that smart ladies everywhere try so hard to achieve when new clothes and new conquests beckon alluringly at this time of year.

Maybe you feel that you should take a filer and do something about your face, especially if you are planning a party and want the world and your best man to be duly impressed.

That velvet look to your skin that we are forever hearing about but seldom succeed in achieving, it is no longer a myth. You can be transformed as easily as anything with a new make-up foundation cream that is so smooth and lovely you'll believe in Twentieth Century enchantment.

Spread the lightest film of this cream on your face and you'll feel as though the mists of the morning had touched you. It forms a really excellent basis for cream rouge, and if you go in for this form of coloring, it's the cream of creams for you. If you want to be especially glamorous, there's no better base for the skin. It imparts that fresh, youthful look to the complexion, and with the proper shade of powder, will conceal imperfections and blemishes until washed away.

If you are interested in a fruit oil preparation that invigorates and tones up the skin, closing the pores at the same time, I know of just such a freshener. Its basic ingredient is grapefruit and can be used freely on the most sensitive of skins without fear of drying and scarring because it contains absolutely no alcohol.

Apply this lotion with a small piece of cotton, allowing it to penetrate well around your nose and chin where pore areas appear larger than usual. If used in the morning it will form a nice base for powder.

To obtain the names of this new make-up foundation cream and the grapefruit skin freshener, phone Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000. If you prefer writing for this information send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston.

Eye Circles

Question: I am thirty-eight years old and am developing deep, dark circles under my eyes. Is this caused by eye strain, or is it due to an internal disorder? What do you recommend?

A. S., Boston.

Answer: Dark circles under the eyes may be caused by fatigue, lack of rest and sleep, poor circulation, eye-strain or imperfect elimination. From your letter I assume that you need to give more attention to exercise to stimulate circulation, bringing the blood up to nourish the tissues and helping keep the flesh firm and hard.

Practise deep breathing. Take a few setting up exercises, walk at least part of the way to work and part of the way home.

Church Nuptial

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I expect to be married within a few months. The wedding is to be a most informal church wedding. Is three o'clock Saturday afternoon a proper time?

1. Three o'clock on Saturday afternoon is an excellent time for a wedding. Four o'clock is the hour most often chosen for an afternoon wedding, but this doesn't make a bit of difference if three o'clock is your preference.

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

For about four years I have had trouble about getting—also keeping—jobs. Before this intermittancy set in I was the maharajah of my home. Now I'm just the fellow who don't seem to know what it's all about.

My in-laws, who were always great hands to show up with a fork when there was any meat cooking now pitch in at the evening meal with the same gusto and blow off a line of talk with it. They are always curious and anxious to know why I lost the last job what I have in view and why I am discouraged. They dominate the conversation and my wife really pays little attention to me any more. What do I do?

H. R. Z.

DEAR H. R. Z: You just mind your spaghetti, get your full share of it and ignore the superior attitudes of these dependable non-paying guests. Keep your plan and reasons to yourself and when they are throwing their weight around with their opinions develop the habit of a slow grin—indication of sympathy. You wife will get the idea and detach herself from the group, who are getting the amused tolerance.

PANDORA.

CAST INTO EDEN -:- By Henry C. Rowland

CHAPTER XXVIII

Jerome let the chest wait and went back to go out by the front door and discover what all this was about. On the threshold he fetched up with a gasp.

Linda was standing on the edge of the porch. Her bright hair was adorned by a chaplet of orange blossoms and round her neck was a garland of jasmine. She wore a garment that any man, however much of an ignoramus in the field of feminine costuming, could not help but recognize instantly as a bride's dress.

This wondrous fabric entirely clothed Linda, and at the same time it unclothed her. The lace wedding dress had been made to wear over some other garment, however light, and not to be put on next to that finest and loveliest of charm containers, a flawless skin.

CHESTS OPENED

There is a luminosity about a fresh cutaneous surface, even when sun-darkened. This glowed through the open meshes of the lace as a rich old Amontillado glows through the figured design of rare cut glass.

"Linda . . . you've been into the chests . . ."

"Yes, and if we hadn't been so dumb we'd have been into them 10 days ago."

"Please take this off, Linda . . . and try to put everything back just as it was. You're superb . . . glorious . . . but it isn't right."

She said contritely: "I know it, Jerry. Like lilies a tomb or an altar. I just wanted you to see . . . to see me as a bride."

"Well, I've seen . . . and it makes things even harder. Please go take it off, Linda, and put things back as they were."

"All right. It was so lovely I thought I'd slip it on and give you a surprise."

"You have. And it's premature."

"I admit that. But I'm not apt to have a wedding dress when we are wed, and certainly nothing as gorgeous as this wonderful lace. Even my ascetic scruples would balk at looting it."

Linda might have bolted back into the house but it was too late. A dazzling white sun-helmet capping a strongly animated personality swept up into view as if carried by a vigorous bound.

"God . . ." said Linda, faintly.

The Sacred Name was not uttered blasphemously. Neither was it prompted as an expletive. Even in his palsied state Jerome understood what had inspired it . . . Fear, Reverence, and Awe . . . but chiefly Fear.

Linda's ejaculation was descriptive. Just as this spot had impressed them as the Garden of Eden with its glamorous beauty and friendly beasts, the Tree of the Forbidden Fruit, etc., so now did the commanding figure that had so suddenly materialized itself suggest the Lord and Creator of all that was there.

The man was of magnificent physique and commanding visage, with full and evenly trimmed snow-white beard. His costume was of immaculate white, like the helmet.

Jerome muttered under his breath, with a sort of grim despair: "So it is Eden after all! We're sunk!"

This acted on Linda like a tonic. Her lithe figure straightened. "Nothing of the sort," she retorted. "There's been no Fall."

This reminder stiffened Jerome's own back. Like Adam, he became suddenly conscious of his near nakedness. Linda (or Eve) was clad, but Jerome (or Adam) was in only shorts and shoes, and he was embarrassed if not ashamed.

As if to prevent that sort of sentimans that seems always a pity, however preposterous a situation, the illusory atmosphere was swept instantly away. In perfect English and in a deep bass resonant voice the lord of the premises said: "So I was right. You found this island and repaired your boat. Then it was perhaps my meddlesome apes that put you adrift."

"Yes, sir," Jerome answered.

Linda asked:

"Are you going to be angry with me for putting on this gown?" asked Linda.

"That depends. Why did you put it on?" A deep furrow drew itself straight down between his eyes.

"The gorillas stole our clothes." She described briefly how this destitution had occurred. The big man stroked his beard.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Dieman. The wedding gown you are wearing was made many years ago for my bride. If you are like she was, there is no offense."

Jerome remarked quietly, "Sir, she is."

"And where is the boat?"

"Under the house, sir. We were afraid the gorillas might damage it."

"But those apes are very shy and have been taught to keep away from the house premises. I am surprised they should have shown themselves at all. My servant, Matta, disciplined them."

Linda murmured: "I was wrong about the Deb."

"The Deb?"

"That's what we call the young lady that tags after Papa Gorilla. S'e always spoils him."

He smiled." Yes. I'm afraid that his conjugal fidelity is subject to reproach. Another of my captains secured me some mouffion from Sardinia. I'm very fond of animals but dislike the idea of confining them closely. To me a menagerie or zoo is like penal institutions where the prisoners are innocent of all crimes deserving of incarceration. Other ships of ours have brought me specimens of different sorts that should live peacefully together."

Frock for Town or Country

By MARION MARTIN

PATTERN 9083

The nice thing about this frock—one of the nice things—is that you can wear it buttoned up some days and opened on others. If you face the rever with a contrasting color, as in the illustration, if not—it really makes a different frock of it. It is one of those house dresses which may be worn out-of-doors in the country or for shopping in the mornings. The inverted pleat makes the sleeves most flattering. Very attractive in a plain fabric as well as a printed one.

Pattern 9083 may be ordered only in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4 yards 36 inch fabric and ¾ yard contrasting.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

How would you like a book of fashions designed for sun-drenched days and starlit nights? It tells you about, and has pictures of everything from a wedding dress to a garden frock. It shows you the latest fabrics, and tells wisely about beauty. In short . . . it's a treasure! Ilv the SUMMER EDITION OF THE MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN BOOF AND IT COSTS FIFTEEN CENTS. THE BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER ARE TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

Disasters From Overbidding

By Josephine Culbertson

Some Bridge players are natural overbidders. They violon the near certainty of a game if they hold a bare minimum Opening bid and the great probability of a Slam if holding a hand which should produce game. In watching the bidding of players who exaggerate the value of the cards they hold and the values shown by partner's minimum responses, one is apt to wonder how they ever score one game, to say nothing of a rubber.

This type of player should perhaps be forbidden by law to use the Four-Five Notrump Convention, for the possession of two Aces and the King off a suit is apt to result in a frenzy of overbidding, the player forgetting that this convention is used only after a strength-showing bid by one partner or the other and generally only after the suit in which the hand is to be played has been agreed upon.

All this leads up to the story of a rubber played in a New York club recently.

Two players, strangers to each other, were introduced and out as partners. One was a fairly expert player, the other an overbidder.

"And you play Culbertson, Mr. X—" the overbidder asked.

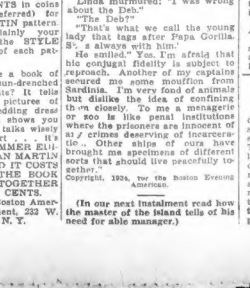
"Oh yes," was the reply

"And use the Four-Five Notrump Convention?" the catechism continued.

"Certainly," was the response. And the cards were dealt.

By some happy chance North and South, with South Dealer, bid and made a game on the first hand. The next hand was passed out, and North, the overbidder, then dealt as below:

North, Dealer
North and South vulnerable



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣ (1)	Pass	1 ♡ (2)	Pass
2 ♢ (3)	Pass	2 NT (4)	Pass
4 NT (5)	Pass	5 ♣ (6)	Pass
5 ♡ (7)	Double (8)	Pass	Pass
Pass

(1) If North plans to show both clubs and diamonds, he should first show the diamond suit as the hand is too weak distributionally to reverse in the bidding.

(2) South does not want to crowd the bidding and so responds with his shaded heart suit, rather than notrump.

(3) Two notrump would have been a better bid.

(4) In view of the North's strong bidding, South must respond. The reversal of suits is an Informital Force.

(5) Of course, North's proper bid now is three notrump.

(6) South attempts to sign-off. He knows that the use of the Slam Convention here is not conventional but he fears that his partner so construes it and so feels compelled to respond.

(7) Now for the first time showing support for South's Takeout.

(8) East is afraid to wait for a chance to double a Slam as South's sign-off causes him to fear that it will not be bid.

The disaster was not as great as it might have been, the opponents being a mere baby—only 800 points, but the overbidder had added another to the long list of Bridge players who should not to cut him as a partner.

Rings Clip Frock

THE METAL rings on an ordinary loose-leaf school book inspired a clever shoe and bag ensemble just arrived from Paris. The large rectangular bag has a looped handle attached by means of metal rings, exactly like the rings of a loose-leaf book. The shoe, a high cut Oxford of matching black kid, employs these silvery circlets for eyelets, through which ribbon laces are pulled.

Senators, Desperate, Go Back to Spring Training Methods

Collins Makes Prophecy About Jimmy Foxx; Joe McCarthy Eyes Werber

By AUSTEN LAKE

THE GREEN GRASS CARPET, freshly laundered after the recent rains, stretched over the Red Sox playground, where workmen in mustard-colored jumpers hoed and scraped to remove the bleat scars where the Washington ball club had practiced during the morning. Aloft, in the upper levels of the grandstand, Eddie Collins and his official family sat like crows on the ridgepole of a barn

Austen Lake

First time I ever heard of a major league club taking morning workouts in August," Eddie mused.

Perhaps it is the first time in major league history that a manager, upset at finding his last year's champions in the also-ran class, has doubled back to spring training methods at this late date, hopeful of snatching his fat from the fire by doing his men with overtime in the hottest period of the year.

It is sharp medicine that bespeaks Cronin's desperation.

seball's Wisemen Fail to Read the Future

I HAPPEN TO KNOW THAT, previous to last spring's training season, Eddie Collins and Tom Yawkey, wrote out their ophecies of how the league standing would finish, sealing those nions, unseen by the other, in envelopes to be opened on the last of play. They are playful like that.

"I'll bet," I suggested to Eddie, "that you did not pick Detroit as a front runner." And he said "No," he hadn't dreamed t it. He would have selected Washington and the Yankees as 1-2.

Now Collins has the reputation among baseball thinkers as eing the shrewdest baseball head in the game. And it serves to ow that not even the keenest brain, which knows the relative alue of every player in the league, could have foreseen a Washington collapse and a Detroit climb.

ONE BASEBALL TOPIC IS taboo with Collins these days. That concerns the possibility of Connie Mack trading Jimmy Foxx, his ace slugger, to the Red Sox during next winter. Yet after refusing to comment, Eddie suddenly said, "I'll predict this. If Foxx doesn't play first for Connie next year, he'll catch for him."

Eddie was serious. Yet the thought of Foxx, who has not worn a catcher's mitt and pads for six years, going behind the plate again and risking his valuable fingers, seems outlandish.

"Anyway," summed up Eddie, "I'm not making any effort to dicker for Foxx."

Yet, in all honor to Collins, he said the same thing up to several weeks before Grove was suddenly sold to Boston last winter.

RICK FERRELL, SOX CATCHER and older half of the Ferrell family battery, told me an incident this morning which has never seen print before. It seems that, after each major league season, the Ferrells, Rick and Wes, go home to Guilford, N. C., where they play a few rounds of exhibition ball for the natives.

Last year, while Wes was still the property of Cleveland, he and Rick formed a battery in an all-star game, in which major leaguers manned both sides. And Wes, who had had a bad league season, pitched so effectively that Rick sat down that evening and wrote to Eddie Collins about it.

Rick knew that Wes, even then, was determined to do no more playing for Cleveland. And so he did a little brotherly scouting, advising Collins to bid Wes in for Boston. In the end, when Wes stubbornly stuck to his guns and refused to report to Cleveland, Collins did buy Wes' contract presumably on Rick's judgment, which at this late stage seems to have been sound.

Kibitzer Makes a Sentimental Journey

KIBITZER IS A SHINY little horse, with the color and sheen of a mahogany piano. And just now Kibitzer is contentedly munching oats and carrots in the Bartlestein stable at Narragansett. There is a sentimental story behind this. Because it is the second time that Bartlestein has owned the animal, having had him claimed early this year by an owner named Chaney.

Chaney and Bartlestein both brought their stables to Rockingham last month, where, during the midnight fire that took the lives of several horses, Kibitzer was shooed out of his stall and into the night.

Yet, when it came time to round up the loose horses, Kibitzer was nowhere to be found until late the next day, when Bartlestein's trainer, Harry Unna, found the little horse snugly occupying one of his spare stalls. It tickled Unna to think that the animal had sought out his old fellowship instead of returning to his rightful owner's stable, and he urged Bartlestein to buy him back. Which, for the sake of sweet sentiment, was done. Chaney, touched too, let Kibitzer go for the original claiming price.

JOE McCARTHY, YANKEE MANAGER who sold Bill Werber to the Red Sox last year as so much excess baggage, has hinted strongly to Bucky Harris that he would like to buy or trade Bill back to New York. He is said to be ready to give the Sox a handful of Yankee players. Yet Bucky, who not so many months ago was ready himself to ship Werber into the minor league canebrake, merely smiles after the manner of a pussy cat which has swallowed a very nice, tasty mouse.

"Sure, Joe can have Werber," he says, "if he gives us Gomes, Gehrig and . . . well, that would be enough."

Trio of Net Queens Preparing for Advance on Throne at Longwood

AMATEUR NET ACES INVADE LONGWOOD

By Walter Kidey

An influx of amateur tennis stars such as has been witnessed in Boston seldom since United States lost the Davis cup some years ago, today started converging on Longwood Cricket Club for the 42d annual Longwood Bowl singles and doubles championships for both men and women which start Monday.

National ranked stars are liberally sprinkled through the two draws.

Drawings which are being made today by the Longwood officials headed by Henry R. Guild, club president, and Chairman John S Mitchell of the tennis committee, probably will result in the players being seeded in the following order:

No. 1, Wilmer Allison; 2, Byran M. "Pitty" Grant, Jr.; 3, Frank Parker; 4, R. Berkeley Bell; 5, John Van Ryn; 6, Henry Prusoff; 7, Donald Budge; 8, Jack Tidball.

Men's singles are scheduled to start at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon with the women's singles beginning at 10 o'clock Monday morning. Men's doubles start Tuesday afternoon and women's doubles on the morning of the same day.

The doubles field is all the more attractive with the positive assurance that George Lott and Lester Stoefen, world's outstanding combination will reach Longwood after their overseas' trip from England in time to play in the second round matches.

John Gorham Palfrey, Jr., of the famed Palfrey tennis family is going out to do things in a big way on the court. John left Boston this morning, bound for the 1934 national junior championships at Culver Military Academy, Indiana, which start next Monday.

He was chosen by the New England Lawn Tennis Association as one of two youths who are to represent this section. His companion and fellow representative is Harry Thompson, Jr., of Arlington, No player on Andover's tennis team, and 15-year-old son of the tennis professional at the Essex County Club at Manchester.

Dean Wins 19th

St Louis, Aug. 4 (US)—Jerome "Dizzy" Dean continued his superb pitching, hanging up his 19th win of the season as the Cardinals triumphed over Pittsburgh, 9 to 3.

Three queens of the tennis world will wield their regal racquets in quest of the Longwood Bowl, coveted net trophy, at the Longwood Cricket Club, starting Monday morning. The trio are members of this year's Wightman Cup team. Miss Palfrey of Sharon and Brookline is highly rated to outlast the star studded field, her No. 4 national ranking topping the list of invading women. Miss Babcock, a Pacific Coast ace, provided a stirring upset as she disposed of Miss Jacobs in the final of the recent Seabright tournament. Miss Cruickshank is numbered among the best court performers in the land. (Pictures by International News Photo Service.)

LEGUME IN FIRST WILSON'S BEST AT NARRAGANSETT TODAY

HADAGAL TOP CHOICE IN 'CAP FEATURE RUN

Williams Handicap, one-mile feature here today.

The son of Sir Gallahad III and Eme, a full brother to Panay Walker, ran a corking race in the mile and one-quarter of the Arlington Handicap, and was only beaten a half-length on the wire by Riskulus and Watch Him. Back of him in that effort were Indian Runner, Good Goods and other handicap stars of the day.

H. P. Metcalfe's Legume, who was second to Toolbox last out, shapes up as decidedly the best of an indifferent lot of juvenile fillies in the five and one-half furlongs of the opening number, and looms as the day's safest wagering proposition.

LEGUME, HOGAN'S FOX, RIGHT RANK

LEGUME has only to run back his last race in order to be rated the winner in this affair. A Mitchell-owned thoroughbred out a dizzy pace in that effort t was unable to cope with Tool x during the stretch run. With thing as formidable as Tool Box ted to perform, he should never ave the least trouble in doing so. HOGAN'S FOX, a highly regarded juvenile the H. T. Archibald stable, has ove the most troublesome of the ntenders. His lone race at Rockingham was in the nature of education and may be discarded. RIGHT RANK finished third behind Happy Helen and Home Loan in his last Salem outing.

PROSECUTOR, FAKE, ALARIC

PROSECUTOR ran a whale of a race to place to Candy Prince at Salem last week. The Zev colt is picking up considerable weight off that effort, but that should not stop him from drubbing this ordinary lot. FAKE, who finished third behind speedy little Dinah in her last, shapes up as the main danger. ALARIC turned in several corking efforts at Empire City and must be rated the best of the also-rans.

TOYTIME, CANTERSINE, MISS MOROCCO

Under the weight arrangements, I'm forced to string along with TOYTIME. This way rigged the S. W. Labrot thoroughbred drubbed CANTERSINE at the opening of the session. Cantersine is razor sharp as the work his will attest and should take it all if the top one falters. MISS MOROCCO hopped up and trimmed a similar field to this at Rockingham Park and is all dangerous.

BIFF, LEONIE, FRIAR MARK

BIFF should be well suited by all the conditions of this affair. The son of Broadside was only beaten by parts of a length in the recent Salem session by Adobe Post. A repetition of that race would surely place him squarely in the winner's circle. LEONIE is dropping down with a good best. FRIAR MARK failed to run his usual race yesterday.

HIGH GLEE, CHINESE EMPRESS, SOBIEHA

It's a mighty tight fit here between HIGH GLEE and CHINESE EMPRESS, but I'm going to trust fate by stringing along with the former. The Paramond 2nd filly ran a smashing race to place to Black Hand in her last outing at Salem and is picking up only two pounds. CHINESE EMPRESS' last was all that could be desired, but she is picking up eight pounds. SOBIEHA has been burning up the track in the mornings and is rated better than an outside chance.

HADAGAL, BLACK BUDDY, ADJUSTABOUT

HADAGAL will have BLACK BUDDY to drub. The latter captured the R. T. Wilson Memorial Stakes earlier in the week at Saratoga and should force Hadagal to the limit. ADJUSTABOUT returned the rich Rockingham Park handicap on "getaway" day over a muddy track at Rockingham. Should the going come up muddy or heavy he will be all dangerous.

STEPBROTHER, GRAND ACRE, HERNANDO

STEPBROTHER has only to duplicate his winning race of Saturday to lead home this field. GRAND ACRE drubbed a fair lot on opening day and figures close up. HERNANDO turned in a nice effort to place to Plumage in his last.

DAUDET, POLT, CEE, COLD SPELL

DAUDET could win an affair of this kind if he would carry his true weight. The Dodge colt would have trimmed a better field than this at Salem, but for carrying several pounds overweight. POLLY CEE was the front running example of her last race. With better rating, she may hang on long enough to stall off COLD SPELL. The latter's last was far below her usual form and may be disregarded.

Trainer's License Revoked by Hanna

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 4 (US)—The license of Joseph F. Patterson, famous trainer for the Audley Farms, was revoked by Mark Hanna, Michigan racing commissioner.

As a result of an alleged attempt to administer a stimulant to a horse here, Patterson recently was convicted in federal court of violating the Harrison Narcotic Act.

SALEM $5000 STAKE DRAWS GREAT FIELD

By Ed Cogswell

Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H. Aug. 4—The race of the year is predicted for this afternoon at the Grand Circuit meeting here, for six of the greatest young trotters ever to take the word face the starter in the $5,000 American stake.

Added interest is given the event through its same field competing in the $40,000 Dumbleton, the Kentucky Derby of the trotting horse world. The three-year-olds entered are Hanoletone, 2:03½; Reynolda, 2:03¼; Emily Stokes, 2:04, Bertha C. Hanover, 2:04, Fay Mack, 2:07 and The Gem.

Any of the first four youngsters named are counted able to win.

MUSCLETONE CHOICE

With Doc Parsnall behind Muscletone, it is most likely that he will carry the heavy money.

Others will point to the great race Emily Stoke put up at Toledo. Then Reynolda has been a serious contender in all of her starts, and can't be overlooked.

But the American stake is not all that the customers will see this afternoon, for before the sun goes down there will have been decided ten races—a big card for one day's sport. Even Nashua, Telegram has a choice field. From all reports the winner should be Lu Barient. His record this year on both the Bay State Circuit and the Roaring Grand have stamped him a highclass trotter.

TRIO OF CONTENDERS

Then the third race on the card, for a $1000 purse, has at least three to be reckoned on. Blue Dry worthy, Sally D. Scott and Estrellita. Another for $1000 is the ninth race with eight starters.

Two handicaps are listed, the fourth and sixth races. These events the horses get the word from a standing start, being handicapped from scratch up to 30 feet.

What the Stars Did

By Associated Press

Dizzy Dean, Cardinals— Pitched 10th victory against Pirates and knocked in two runs with triple against.

Johny Vergez and Carl Hubbell, Giants—Vergez' homer with bases full behind Hubbell's pitching.

Fuck Stainback, Cubs—Singled in with two runs that beat Reds.

Lou Gehrig, Yankees—Hit two homers and single for perfect day at bat against Athletics.

WHEAT BUYING POWER UNDER YEAR AGO

Condition Seen as Due to Price Raising Formulas

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Small crops and high prices have created a condition in which the average farmer buying power is much higher. Figures coming to the writer show that there is a big gain in wheat for actual buying power as it per cent under a year ago. This, understand, is the case in most sections of the country. It will be about 20 per cent under.

The situation in corn is much the same, with the difference that the price raising formulas put into effect by various new deal agencies in other directions. One result is that the farmer is getting more. The wheat certificate plan is helping. But more where a cold blooded study of the matter on the other hand. It appears that even higher prices for certain crops may be expected.

Note:—Wheat and corn for that matter now seem to be selling at unjustifiable low price levels. . . . And these two cereals have a habit of ultimately adjusting their relationships to the general price level and supply of. And nevertheless the tinkering man is doing his best to upset the apple cart. Many think the price of wheat and corn will soon go to the other extreme. The possibility of sharp reactions is heightened because of the size of the crops to harvest, but this is not to be viewed as a deterrent as to ultimate high prices.

The reason business men anxious to wait on some measure of relief from the administration is simply illustrated by the following statement. A 66 per cent increase in the cost of wheat will result in a decrease of 37 per cent in net profits. The answer cannot be that this is a fair part of recovery. The figures are too distorted. The profit motive is approaching the point of disregard. The harder a man works, the more he is penalized. Why should he in a capitalistic system? Something must soon be done to change the picture or business will not long go ahead.

Briefs: The statements of motor companies are going to tell a poor story. But when the motor companies put out their figures the government will have something to think over. . . . For the industry is the key to general prosperity. . . . The slaughter of tonnaging with air mail contracts. . . . The only saving grace in the situation picture is that manufacturing companies will soon feel the benefits of large scale Army and Navy order profits. But were not those profits to be closely scrutinized?

In consideration of all the above factors it is hardly any wonder that share prices have declined considerably since July 17. Apparently they are not through with the process. It is a point trading rat, as far as the industrials are concerned. There is more or less in line with a static business picture. Hence the rally appears to be expected to run around seven and one-half points before some distinct impetus is developed. It will either be inflation or emergency of the public which will do the trick.

This and That: And with all that all our chest we say goodbye for two weeks or . . . Perhaps a rest will help . . . Sometimes things look a lot better after a rest . . . But in the meantime we are going to be here and there will be little stirring. . . . Expected by many to be promised for the first part of August . . . Not unless Congress is expected . . . And unless all the signs fail, there will be some mighty nice shipping in a new line as a group.

MRS. DALL BACK ON HER JOB AT WHITE HOUSE

By Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 4 — Anna Roosevelt Dall, bronzed and healthy looking, returned to Washington today, saying she expected to stay at the White House and work "until the family goes to Hyde Park." Mrs. Dall said, laughing, when told the White House is in a state of upheaval:

"They'll have to find a bed for me somewhere!"

Business offices crowding the lower floor of the mansion because of building operations at the executive offices, she was informed.

She described Nevada, where she obtained a divorce from Curtis Dall Monday, as "a glorious spot," adding that she certainly would not have come home if she had not found it necessary to get back to work, She added.

"I've been on horseback five and six hours a day. I've been swimming every day. Up at 6 o'clock in the morning and to bed at 9."

Asked concerning details of the divorce agreement and the custody of the children, Sistie and Bussie Mrs. Dall said:

"I consider that a purely personal matter. And it's all over and finished."

She wore a green ensemble, a small bright green felt hat contrasting with her blonde hair.

The President's daughter said she was continuing the work that she and her mother do together, writing for publications.

Mrs. Dall was met at the station by Raymond Muir, chief usher at the White House.

If you are looking for a furnished or unfurnished home or apartment or room, let Barbara Holmes do your worrying for you. You'll find her every day at R. H. White Co. from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall returned to the White House today from Nevada with her divorce. She said she "had to buckle down and work at her writing." She said Nevada is "glorious." She is shown with a woman reporter and a secret service agent.

Pity Poor Hubby! New Gowns Button in Back

By JANE EADS

Universal Service Special Wireless

Paris, Aug. 4—Page the patient husbands. The coats, tunic dresses and blouses featured in today's winter fashion previews button in back!

A large number of American buyers saw Lucille Paray's collection of short coats of fur and wool and capes of velvet or metal paillettes, all with back fastenings.

They also took in Maggy Rouff's collection, which featured a black satin and wool tunic fastening at the top and waist, and several taffeta and satin blouses with the same novelty.

Romantic gowns in the Florentine touch in stiff satins and taffetas and velvets, with long medieval or elbow-length sleeves and full length skirts, were introduced in Maggy Rouff's show for dinner and evening wear, contrasting oddly with the slinky shimmering gowns featuring slits to the knee and trains.

MUFFS AT ELBOWS

Other winter fashion tips in the shows included muffs worn on elbows, muffs of quilted lamb and muffs of fur; Paillette afternoon and evening gowns that clink like the armor of knights of old; capes of every length, some touching the floor; tuck-in scarfs of fur and bright Christmas-like colored linings in lark coats.

High crowned coachman hats, bustles and old-fashioned fur stoles and 12-button colored spats were the highlights of the fall and winter showings. Chanel's evening gowns all featured big bows of taffeta forming bustles at the back. Her wool suits were all fur-trimmed with little matching Russian peasant turbans banded in the same fur.

Helma introduced coachman hats of stiffened satin and wool, matching ensemble of the same fabrics. Bright yellow broadcloth "gaiters" were shown in the same collection, with tweed suits and matching vests.

An enormous plaque of brooches of chiselled mirror and metal heart and a moonshaped, silver bell-buckle of clasped hands, gilt bird-cage pendants with mirrored birds and fur caps with stole ends were other features.

GLOVES PART OF SLEEVES

Some fashionable women will not be able to drop their gloves this winter even if they coquettishly try. Winter coats featured in the Molyneux collection had sleeves and gloves cut in one piece like children's sleeper-suits. The only outlet for freeing the hand without removing the coat is a tiny opening at the wrist, where the hand may be wriggled through.

Gloves, by the way, are breaking out with originality in next season's preview. There are any number fashioned in the same fabric as the ensemble with which they are worn; for example, tweed gloves with tweed sport suits, taffeta and sequin gauntlet gloves with evening gowns and ermine mits with ermine collared coats. Fur cuffs are shown on many gloves to match fur coat and hat trimmings.

Blouse-backed dresses, bloused capes and evening gowns with trains, but minus the popular slit and bustle back featured in other collections, were the highlights of Lucien Le Long's showing. One black sheer crepe, spiralled with lace ruching, however, featured a pleated lace petticoat and hem, faced with red ribbon and reminiscent of the ballet costumes in "Union Pacific."

Another, reminiascent of other days, was a grey taffeta with a semi-bespoke skirt of cording and called "Little Women."

Copenhagen, Aug. 4 (AP)—Prince Herald, a brother of King Christian of Denmark, broke his leg and suffered other injuries when he fell downstairs in the dark last night.

COSTELLO JURY PLANS REUNION

Just a year ago Jessie Burnett Costello's name was in the headlines where Hitler is now. Things have happened in the world since then and some persons have quite forgotten Salem's spectacular poison trial—but not the jury that acquitted the widow of the murder of her fire captain husband, William J. Costello.

The jurymen are now planning a reunion. August 14 has been tentatively selected as the date and the Hotel Hawthorne, where the jury was kept during the trial, is the place. Arrangements are now in the hands of Herbert F. Simonds, of 22 Coolidge avenue, Lynn, one of the jurors.

The married jurors will have wives along, accordingly to present plans and invitations will be extended to Judge Frederick W. Fosdick, who presided at the trial, and District Attorney Cregg, as well as to Mrs. Costello's lawyers, William Clark and Francis Rafter.

GERMS ON FLIES KILL CHILDREN

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 4—Warning was broadcast today that common house flies were carrying the deadly germs of a form of dysentery that has killed five children and sent more than half a hundred others to hospitals during the past week.

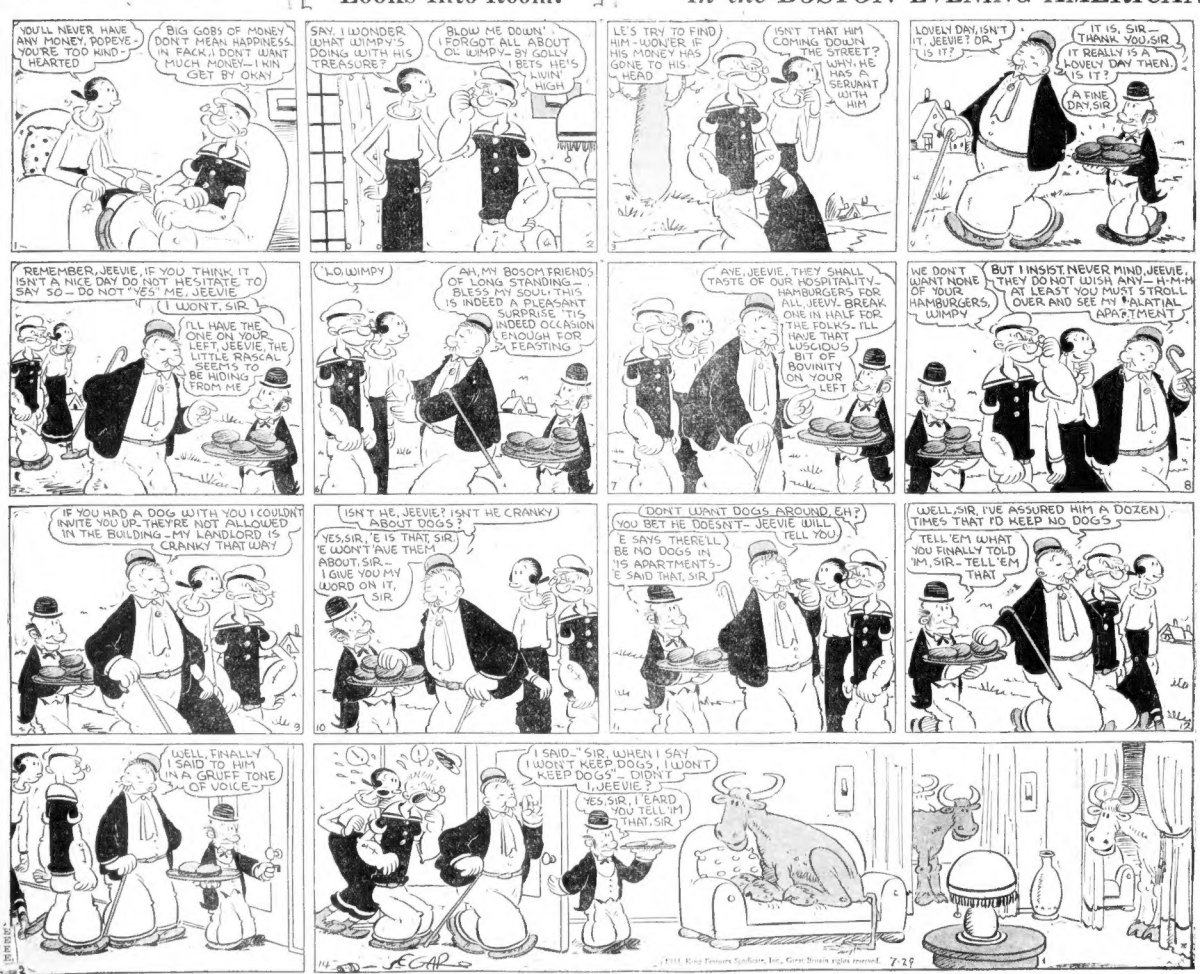
Health bureau authorities had to call for federal aid to combat the disease. Discovery that house flies were carriers of the germ was made when a special serum, brought here by plane from Washington, was injected into the blood of Dorothy Green, a 3-year-old victim.

Dr. Edward H. Salmon, head of the communicable diseases division immediately issued a warning to all residents to screen all doors and windows, take particular care of food and use disinfectants freely.

POPEYE

What's This That Looks Into Room?

Exclusive Big Feature Every Saturday In the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN



YOU'LL NEVER HAVE ANY MONEY, POPEYE - YOU'RE TOO KIND-HEARTED
BIG GOBS OF MONEY DON'T MEAN HAPPINESS. IN FACT, I DON'T WANT MUCH MONEY—I KIN GET BY OKAY
SAY, I WONDER WHAT WIMPY'S DOING WITH HIS TREASURE?
BLOW ME DOWN! I FORGOT ALL ABOUT OL WIMPY—BY GOLLY I BETS HE'S LIVIN' HIGH
LE'S TRY TO FIND HIM - WON'ER IF HIS MONEY HAS GONE TO HIS HEAD
ISN'T THAT HIM COMING DOWN THE STREET? WHY, HE HAS A SERVANT WITH HIM
LOVELY DAY, ISN'T IT, JEEVIE? OR IS IT?
IT IS, SIR. THANK YOU, SIR. IT REALLY IS A LOVELY DAY THEN, IS IT?
A FINE DAY, SIR
REMEMBER, JEEVIE, IF YOU THINK IT ISN'T A NICE DAY DO NOT HESITATE TO SAY SO - DO NOT "YES" ME, JEEVIE
I WON'T, SIR.
I'LL HAVE THE ONE ON YOUR LEFT, JEEVIE. THE LITTLE RASCAL SEEMS TO BE HIDING FROM ME
LO, WIMPY
AH, MY BOSOM FRIENDS OF LONG STANDING— BLESS MY SOUL! THIS IS INDEED A PLEASANT SURPRISE. 'TIS INDEED OCCASION ENOUGH FOR FEASTING
AYE, JEEVIE, THEY SHALL TASTE OF OUR HOSPITALITY— HAMBURGERS FOR ALL. JEEVY, BREAK ONE IN HALF FOR THE FOLKS. I'LL HAVE THAT LUSCIOUS BIT OF BOVINITY ON YOUR LEFT
WE DON'T WANT NONE OF YOUR HAMBURGERS, WIMPY
BUT I INSIST. NEVER MIND, JEEVIE. THEY DO NOT WISH ANY— H-M-M-H AT LEAST YOU MUST STROLL OVER AND SEE MY PARTIAL APARTMENT
IF YOU HAD A DOG WITH YOU I COULDN'T INVITE YOU UP. THEY'RE NOT ALLOWED IN THE BUILDING - MY LANDLORD IS CRANKY THAT WAY!
ISN'T HE, JEEVIE? ISN'T HE CRANKY ABOUT DOGS?
YES, SIR, 'E IS THAT, SIR. 'E WON'T 'AVE THEM ABOUT, SIR— I GIVE YOU MY WORD ON IT, SIR
DON'T WANT DOGS AROUND, EH? YOU BET HE DOESN'T - JEEVIE WILL TELL YOU
E SAYS THERE'LL BE NO DOGS IN 'IS APARTMENTS - 'E SAID THAT, SIR
WELL, SIR, I'VE ASSURED HIM A DOZEN TIMES THAT I'D KEEP NO DOGS
TELL 'EM WHAT YOU FINALLY TOLD 'IM, SIR - TELL 'EM THAT WELL, FINALLY I SAID TO HIM IN A GRUFF TONE OF VOICE—
I SAID—" SIR, WHEN I SAY I WON'T KEEP DOGS, I WON'T KEEP DOGS"— DIDN'T I, JEEVIE?
YES, SIR, I 'EARD YOU TELL 'IM THAT, SIR

3 Men Arrested After Cars Crash

Three auto crashes in Central square, Cambridge, within an hour of each other resulted in three men being under arrest today.

Michael Binkwics, 18, of Phillips street, West End, was arraigned on a charge of driving without a license and operating a car alleged to be stolen, after he had crashed into a parked car.

Charged with drunkenness, James H. Curry, of Frost street, Cambridge, was taken into custody after he had collided with another machine at Green and Pleasant streets. George J. Truedell, 39, of Putnam avenue, Cambridge, was arrested on a similar charge.
